AN EXCITING MAN HUNT

Two Desperadoes Give Dunbar Officers Lots of Trouble.

BOTH WANTED ON SERIOUS CHARGES

Chased for Miles and Finally Evade Capture—They Belonged to the Band of Outlaws That Came From the South Several Years Ago

Dunbar, Pa., July 14.—Officers Duncan and Wilgus had an exciting chase this morning after two colored desperadoes. the two men are known as Finny and Wright, and both are wanted on several charges of assault with intent to kill and robbery. Finney shot a young colored girl at Elm Grove on July 7 and escaped, and Wright attempted to take the life of a man by the name of Jackson several months ago.

This morning word was received that Finney and Wright were seen near Dunbar furnace, and officers went in pursuit. The fugatives fled toward the mountains. For four miles the officers chased the men and twice nearly succeeded in capturing them. Wright was shot and fell, and was up again and escaped. Many shots were exchanged before the pursuit was abandoned.

Later it was reported that the out-laws had taken refuge in a shanty in the mountains, and a posse composed of Officers Duncan and Wilgus and Constable Cole and James Harper went, heavily armed, to take them, but the men had abandoned the shanty and fled toward Cumberland.

Both Finney and Wright are desperate characters, and are greatly feared by their own race. They belonged to a band of outlaws that came from the South to break the coke strike of 1894.

Holy Communion.

The Holy Communion will be administered in St. John's Reformed church, Bellefonte, Pa., on Sunday morning, July 19, at the usual hour for divine services. On Saturday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock preparatory services will be held. Immediately after the preparatory services there will be a baptismal service. All who have infants or little children to be baptized will please bring them to this service.

Making Little Progress.

Hittston, Pa., July 13.—There is little to report from the ill-fated Twin shaft. The rescuers have struck large boulders of solid rock and are not making more than eight or ten feet headway a day. The investigation will be resumed on Thursday next.

An Old Proverb Doubted.—A—Cleanliness is next to godliness. B—May be so, but you wouldn't think it to hear a man talk when a soap factory is established in his neighborhood.—Texas Siftings.

—The drinking of the light wines of France and other Continental countries is often favorably spoken of. The action of the French Academy of Medicine does not sustain that favorable opinion. It recently adopted a series of resolutions declaring that the drink evil has become a permanent danger attacking 'the very life and force of the country' and laying stress on the fact that even the purest alcohol 'is always and fundamentally a poison.' Speaking of legal restrictions, M. Rochard, a member of the illustrious scientific body, said: 'I know that this is difficult to accomplish. Alcohol is a terrible power. The professional hierarchy (the manufacturers and dealers) holds the country enlaced in the meshes of a net of unavoidable self-interest without pity.'—The Kingdom.

Thousands are suffering excruciating misery from that plague of the night, Itching Piles, and say nothing about it through a sense of delicacy. Instant relief in Doan's Ointment. It never fails.

—Levi Pennington is happy over the arrival of a new baby boy at his home on Tuesday morning.

MET DEATH IN A TUNNEL.

Terrible Collision at Washington, Pa.—Traffic Delayed for Many Hours.

Washington, Pa., July 12.—A bad freight wreck occurred near here this morning which blockaded the track for 12 hours and resulted in the loss of one life. This morning at 4.25 as through freight No. 1338, on the Baltimore & Ohio line, Pittsburg and Wheeling division, was passing through Brady's tunnel, about two miles east of Washington, it met with a terrible accident. The tunnel is about a mile in length, and is arched at both ends with brick. The centre, however, had been walled up with plar king, which is supposed to have rotted and let the dirt and sand sift through until quite an obstruction had been formed, and the heavy freight train running rapidly, plunged into the blockade, which threw it off the ties into the side of the tunnel and mashed it to pieces. Just as the accident occurred John Connelly, the conductor, was crossing from one car to the engine, when he was thrown violently from the engine under the pile of dirt and the life was crushed out of him. This death is the third accident resulting in loss of life that has occurred at this place, and Mr. Connelly is the sixth brother of his family to have met a violent death in railroad accidents. He was 32 years old. Coroner Johnson held an inquest this afternoon, but the verdict will not be given out until Wednesday, as some testimony is yet to be taken. The wreck resulted in the demolishing of the engine and one freight car, and the loss will be heavy. The track was cleared this afternoon and trains are now running again on time. Connelly's home was in Glenwood, and the body was taken there for burial.

Robbed of His Roll.

Beaver Falls, July 14.—This afternoon Abel Hunter, an old one-legged soldier, who keeps a small fruit farm near Industry came here to sell berries. He had a pension check for $90 which he got cashed at Beaver. He went to the house of Robert Ridly, of the outskirts of Beaver Falls, to deliver berries, and Mrs. Ridley invited him in while she got the money to pay for them. She went up stairs and then Hunter alleges Ridley ran in, presented a revolver at his head with the threat that he would blow out his brains if he said a word. Then Ridley took his pocketbook, containing $125, ran out and disappeared. Hunter hastened to police headquarters and at a late hour to night Ridley was apprehended and locked up. The money was not recovered.

Mortality in the Coke Region.

Dunbar, July 12.—The mortality in this section of the coke region during the past few weeks is higher than at any time this year, chiefly among small children. The sanitary condition of the coke region is very bad, and where death results from any disease, no effort is made to isolate the sick or dying. Children are permitted to visit and spread the disease. In the smaller coke towns there is no system of sewerage and no sanitary laws. The families live in company houses or three rooms often occupied by from 12 to 20 inmates, and at this season of the year the surrounding yards are in poor sanitary condition.

Fatal Coasting Accident.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., July 12.—Geo. Stone, a druggist, and Charles Sanford, an engineer on the Lehigh Valley railroad, residing at Athens, Pa., while coasting down a hill on a tandem bicycle near Campville today lost control of their wheel and crashed into a bridge. Stone was instantly killed and Sanford was fatally injured. The former is married, the latter single.

Missing More Than a Week.

New Castle, Pa., July 10.—Cornelius Gallagher, a stone contractor at Hazel Dell, has mysteriously disappeared. He left home over a week ago for Pittsburg to collect some bills. Since then nothing has been heard of him. As he was strictly temperate and a model citizen there are fears that he met with foul play after collecting the money. He has a wife and several children.

NARROWLY ESCAPED DEATH

Harry Williams Meets With a Thrilling Experience on Monday

DROPS MANY FEET TO THE GROUND

Just When His Companions Expected to See Him Dashed to Death He Turns a 'Flipper' and Escapes without Even a Scratch—How It Happened.

It is an old saying "that some are born never to die" and unless we are very badly mistaken, we have at least one of these people in Bellefonte. His name is Harry Williams and he passed through an experience on Monday which surpasses by far any wild and wooly west fairy tale we have ever heard of. By actual measuement he passed within two inches and a half of grim death and the most remarkable part of it is, he escaped without even a scratch.

Harry, with a number of other painters were engaged in painting the home of H. H. Montgomery on East High street. He was standing on a ladder when the accident happened. In some way or other, the ladder slipped or broke and he was thrown to the ground.

His companion workmen were horrified at the sight and every one thought he would be dashed to death on the ground below. But that was just where they were fooled. Harry has always been known as quite an acrobat, and has proven equal to any emernency ever encountered so far. His last act was miraculous and thrilling, and he not only performed an almost impossible feat but saved his life in the bargain.

When he found the ladder falling from under him he had nothing to catch hold of for support. He, too, fell and when almost to the ground he turned a flipper and landed squarely on his feet, safe and sound. He was warmly congratulated by his companions over his escape, and when a DAILY NEWS reporter arrived on the scene Harry was working as usual and as unconcerned as if nothing had happened.

PICTURES ON NEW MONEY.

Beautiful Design for the Latest Issue of Silver Certificates.

Washington, July 14.—The first delivery of $1 silver certificates of the new design approved by the Secretary of the Treasury for the issue of 1896 was made to-day. It is composed of the figure of a female, and at her side is a youth to whom she is outlining the history of the nation. A bird's eye view of the city of Washington from Arlington Heights, showing the Potomac river, the Washington monument, the capitol and the new Congressional library building distinctly, is in the background. On the right hand of this design is an open book containing the first clause of the Constitution. Around the border are wreaths, in which are engraved the names of many of the great men who have figured in the history of the nation, including statesmen, warriors, inventors and authors. The back of the note containing the portraits of President and Mrs. Washington, surrounded by beautiful scroll and lathe work.

Secretary Herbert Will Not Support Bryan.

Washington, July 14.—Secretary Herbert is the first member of the cabinet to announce himself openly with respect to the Chicago convention. In reply to an inqury to-day he stated that he would not support the ticket nominated at Chicago, but beyond this brief definition of this position he would say nothing. Other members of the cabinet do not hesitate to say in private conversation that they cannot conscientiously endorse the platform, and it is not unlikely that others of the number will a little later make their announcement publicly.

BIG AND DELIGHTED CROWDS

They Flock to See the Wonderful Automatic Exhibition.

The most popular place in Bellefonte just now is the Automatic Exposition at No. 19 South Allegheny Street. Saturday night the building was crowded with people who paid the pittance of ten cents to see the great wonders. Today the same place was thronged and people went away to tell their neighbors what a magnificent exhibit could be seen for a silver dime. What took seventeen years of constant labor to complete cannot fail to attract the admiration of the people in large numbers.

A short description has been given in this paper and more will be said in the future concerning it. The more one sees of it the more he is lost in wonder, love and praise of what the patient brain and steady hands of one man has wrought. The genial gentleman who presides over the Swiss Village, is called by the multitude to explain the wonder at least a score of time in the afternoon, and as many more in the evening.

People are deeply interested. They see and marvel, but their inquisitive natures babbles up and they must know about this eighth wonder of the world or the wonder of the age. The NEWS representative dropped in upon these gentelemen Saturday evening and was met by a polite usher, who though the building is full to overflow ing at all times, see that every one gets a good place from which to view the wonder.

Not a whit less inviting than the village with its men and women laboring, flirting, singing, walking, dancing, all that people in real life do (yes, and more than some) with the greatest of natural mystifying ease, none the less interesting than the village, we say are the other cabinets where scenery of note, familiar to many who gaze, with fond remembrance of times gone by, and lost in wonderment at the naturalness of the production.

Everything is life and activity, which is difficult to depict correctly, and of which the mechanical genius who constructed these remarkable works, has make a grand success of its every technical point, that of nature. The DAILY NEWS believes that no one who loves art in the stage, where it comes closest to nature's life, should miss this marveous exposition, and has yet the the first person to see who regretted the expenditure of the ten cents which it requires.

New Elk County Line Completed.

The Buffalo and St. Mary's railroad, running from Clermont to St. Mary's, is now complete, the last spike having been driven a few days ago. This line will connect the coal fields of Shawmut with the railroads entering Clermont.

The Department of Agriculture is examining "mustard" samples secured in Philadelphia. It is found that some samples are simply yellow flour and contain no mustard at all.

The first temperance society in the United States was organized at Saratoga, N. Y. in 1808.

—If we are not mistaken, Grover Cleveland was "notified" the same day McKinley was—not in the same sense, however.

—Judging from the number of wheelmen in training just now, Bellefonte will soon be able to have a racing world of its own. Some more races would be acceptable.

—A committee has been appointed by survivors of the gallant 84th Pennsylvania regiment to secures the erection of a monument to Colonel William G. Murray which will be placed at the west front of the court house at Hollidaysburg, not far from the beautiful soldiers' monument dedicated last month.

—A robbery was committed at Tyrone on Monday night. A woman's screams attracted two officers to the house who commenced a search and thinking they had found the burglar they fired several shots at him. They afterwards found out they had peppered a mirror full of bullet holes. They had fired at their own reflection.

—The executive committee of the Young Men's Chistian Association of this state has been accorded the privilige of conducting a gospel tent with reading room, correspondence tables, out and in door games, etc., at the Division encampment of the N. G. P., at Lewistown. Members of the Guard who visited the tent on a similar occasion two years ago will learn of this fact with pleasure, as they there have access to their home papers, and find other accommodations and conveniences not possible to have with them as individuals.

TRAIN DERAILED BY A COW

Serious Accident on the Lehigh Valley Railroad at Pond Creek.

FIFTY PASSENGERS WERE INJURED

An Engine and Three Cars Hurled Down a Fifty-Foot Embankment—The Engineer Almost Instantly Killed—Relief Train Sent to Their Aid From Hazleton.

Wilkesbarre, July 13.—An express train on the Hazleton branch of the Lehigh Valley, railroad while rounding a curve this afternoon between White Haven and Freeland struck a cow. The engine was derailed and thrown down an enbankment 200 feet high and the three passenger coaches were thrown from the tracks upon their sides. One man was killed and a score of people hurt, several seriously. The accident was the most serious passenger wreck that has occurred on the Lehigh Valley railroad since the memorable Mud Run disaster. The dead and injured are:

Dead—W. H. Dowd, engineer.

Injured—Bernard Moony, fireman, broken rib and bruised about the body; Henry Brodhun, arm broken and back and side injured; Mrs. Henry Brodoun, very seriously injured about the back and chest; Patrick McCloskey, cut and bruised about body and limbs and arm broken, condition critical; Mary S. Bauer, cut and; bruised about the head, face and body Mrs. Rosa A. Clark, arm, back and hip injured; Daniel Glonsga, badly bruised; James DeDonald, three ribs broken; Mrs. R. L. Clark, hurt about head and body; Miss Clark, slightly bruised; Frank Lorenz cut about head and shoulders; Miss Lorenz, cut and bruised about body; Charles Gair, scalp wound; A. H. Humphry, hip bruised; William Frehlich, one eye destroyed; Alderman Martin, kneep cap cut and wrenched; E. E. Richards, limbs bruised; Nathaniel Gale, leg bruised and hand injured.

All the passengers aboard the train were badly shaken up, but the above are the most seriously hurt. The train consisted of an engine and three passenger coaches. It left Hazleton at 1.45 p. m. and when it reached a point about 200 yards from Pond Creek it rounded a sharp curve at a speed of about thirty miles an hour, striking a cow, and the animal becoming entangled in the machinery of the engine, throwing it off the track. The engine ran along the ties for a distance of 300 yards and then broke loose from the tender and rolled down an embankment nearly fifty feet. The engine plowed through the ground, then turned over and over, and in a moment was at the foot of the embankement.

The fireman, Mooney, jumped out of the cab window and followed the engine down the bank, receiving serious if not fatal injuries, while Engineer Dowd was pinned under the engine when found. He was so terribly injured and scalded soon after being taken from under the wreck. All three of the coaches turned over on their sides. The passengers were thrown over their seats in all directions and all suffered more or less injured.

A Fugative Heard From.

Altoona, Pa. July 14.—Ex-City Solicitor Ambrose, who decamped from this city a few months ago because of his inability to conceal any longer his thefts of city and building associations money and private funds, is in Australia. He has written to friends here asking for the loan of sufficient money to pay his way home, he says he is stranded. He may decide to come home and undergo a short term of confinement rather than spend the whole of his life in exile.

Death at Milesburg.

Mr. Augustus Smith, died at his home in Milesburg, on Tuesday night at 10.30 o'clock, aged about 55 years. He came to Bellefonte on Wednesday last to witness the balloon ascension and on his way home in the evening was caught in the heavy rain storm. Being subject to rheumatism this brought on a severe attack which resulted in his death as stated. He leaves a wife, and a son and daughter.

—There has not been a single marriage license issued from the Court House during the past week. A rare occurance indeed.

—There will be a festival at the Evangelical church Friday and Saturday evenings of this week. Come and help a good cause.

—Edward Rine had a visitor at his cigar store on Tuesday who made himself so annoying that the police had to remove him. He said he full of "nigger gin" and coulden't help being lively.

THEY WILL CELEBRATE.

A Big Time at Hecla Park to be Given by the Logans.

On Thursday July 30, Hecla Park will be the scene of one of the greatest picnics ever held in Central Pennsylvania. It will be the annual celebration by the Logan Fire Company No. 1 of this city. That it will be a complete success goes without saying as the past reputation of the Logans is such that the very announcement of the fact that they will be in charge on the 30 th is sufficient to insure everybody that it could not be in better hands.

There will be many features to interest everybody. Leo Stevens, the aeronaut, who made a trip to the clouds in this city, last week, will be present and give another wonderful and thrilling balloon ascensions. This alone will be worth far more than your time and little expense to attend. Then there will be a grand display of fire-works athletic events and in fact everything that goes towards making an affair of this kind a success.

There will be for sale on the grounds, excellent refreshments at a nominal sum and no one will be allowed to leave the grounds hungry. It will be a splendid opportunity to take a day's outing—in fact no better could be secured. You will surely regret it if you fail to attend and every one who can should make it a point to be there. Show the Logan's that you appreciate their efforts of the past by patronizing them liberally at their annual picnic.

Maceo's Death Confirmed.

Philadelphia, July 14.—Cablegrams received here to-day from Cuba confirm the truth of the story of the killing of Jose Maceo, brother of Gen. Antonio Maceo, the Cuban insurgent leader.

Since the arrival in Cuba of Gen. Calixto Garcia, that leader and Maceo have not been friendly. Maceo resented the superior authority conferred upon Garcia by the Cuban junta in New York, and Garcia has been determined to assert his superior rank.

When the last cargo from the streamer Three Friends was landed on the coast near Juragua, Maceo marched to the seaboard with 150 men and took poession of the arms and ammunition. As he was returning from the coast he was ambushed and shot to death by men who it was asserted were from his own army.

Centre County Medical Society.

An interesting session of the Centre County Medical Society was held in this city on Tuesday. Henderson of Philipsburg; "Post-Partum Hemorrhage," by Dr. George F. Harris of Bellefonte; "Typhoid Fever," by E. A. Russell of Unionville. A committee of the West Branch Medical Society was present to make arrangements for the holding of their next annual meeting in this city.

If he is prevented by the other and an accident happens because of the interference of the other party in advance, the one causing the obstruction is liable for damages. No one has a right to interfere with any one on the highway, or to check him in passing at any time.

STATE GUARD INSPECTION.

The Program for the Division Encampment at Lewistown.

Harrisburg, July 9.—Col. Edward Morrell, inspector general of the National Guard, issued general orders today for the adjutant general's department giving the details for the inspection of the troops at the division encampment at Lewistown. The infantry of the First brigade will be inspected Monday July 20, of the Second brigade, Tuesday, and of the Third brigade Wednesday. The cavalry will be inspected early Thursday morning and the artillery early Friday morning, that of the junior brigade first.

The inspections will be in state uniform, light marching order, and will be confined principally to inspection drills and field movements The regiments of a brigade will be inspected in inverse order of the seniority of commandments.

The inspection of general appearance and clothing will be immediately followed by regimental battalion and company inspection drills in the order named.

Beginning with the Monday at and continuing through the week of the encampment, regimental guard mount will be inspected at the regular hour set for that ceremony, commencing with the junior brigade. Inspection in guard mount will be held throughout the encampment. The division and three brigade inspectors have been assigned by Gov. Hastings to duty with Col. Morrell from July 11 to 25.

Lieut. Richardson, foreman at the state arsenal, went to Lewistown today with a squad of men to erect divivision head quarters and put the groun s in condition for the regimental details.

Adjt-Gen. Stewart has not yet heard from Secretary of War Lamont in answer to his request for a detail of United States troops to attend the encampment.

The Lawn Sociable.

The members of the Reformed church are noted for their sociables and no matter how often they have them they seem to each time carry off new laurels. On Thursday evening they held a lawn sociable at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Conley, on Logan street, and although others have been fine this one was without doubt the pre'tiest and most "sociable like" sociable that has ever been held in Bellefonte.

The lawn was beautifully decorated with Japanese lanterns and candles, which gave it a very inviting appearance. Everything that the appetite would crave on a warm evening was served and there were many who took advantage of the opportunity to eat a dish of good ice cream and a large piece of cake for a small sum. There was lots of fun for everybody and there was not one who was present but who had a good jolly time.

Great Oaks from Little Acorns Grew,

Is a line from the trite old verse we used to recite n our school boy days. It has a forcible application to those small ailments which we are apt to disregard until they reach formidable proportions. A fit of indigestion, a "slight attack of constipation, it is assumed, will soon pass off, but is very apt to get worse, and in the meantime is neglected until the ailment becomes chronic, and then, if not entirely eradicated, is a constant annoyance and menace of worse consequences, for diseases, reccollect, beget one another. How much wiser to resort to a course of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters at the outset of the malady than to temporize with it at the start, or treat it with violent remedies in its maturity. Be on time with disease, or it may "floor" you. Malarious, Rheumatic and kidney complaints, dyspepsia, constipation, billiousness and nervousness are all disorders of rapid growth, and should be "nipped in the bud" by a timely resort to the Bitters.

A Gifted Man.

"Hopkins has devised a scheme to keep his wife's family from dropping in on them for meals."

"What is it?"

"He has moved next door to hem."

—Edward Selke the young man from Scotia who is thought to be demented and wandered away from home several weeks ago, has not been found although searching parties are still hunting for him.

—J. C. Sibley one of the democratic presidential aspirants didn't even have a ticket to the Convention Hall at Chicago and but for the efforts of Col. Spangler of this city would have been compelled to boom his own candidacy from the outside. Good for our "Jack."

—The old car works dam is the chief centre of attraction during the warm weather. Almost any day one can see the little boy sneaking up to the home of some friend, hold up his two fingers to the little fellow who is not allowed to go swimmin', and then laugh in devilish glee as he is informed in emphatic terms by the good boy's mother that he "must stay away and not try to get her Johnny to do bad things."

WONDERFUL TO BEHOLD.

An Opportunity of a Lifetime to See a Rare Piece of Workmanship.

In this advanced age of mechanism, art and science, one naturally expects to see works of marvel and beauty. But it is seldom that the people of Bellefonte have an opportunity to see something as wonderful as is afforded at the "Swiss Village" on South Allegheny street. It is an exhibition of rare workmanship combined with wealth and beauty such as is only encountered once in a lifetime. One cannot help but be convinced that the world does really move in a mysterious way after once seeing this novel and exceedingly interesting entertainment. It is an exhibition of automatic mechanism, the masterpiece of Joseph Bergmann, and when we say it is beyond comprehension we are but telling the simple truth. Imagine, if you can, a complete village as full of life as though it were real. It is a Swiss Village with its inhabitants in the midst of their daily occupation. Not a picture; but miniature life-like figures who move as though inspired with life. When you have once witnessed this pretty sight, you are convinced that truly the topmost rung of human possibilities has been more than reached and the works of Joseph Bergmann are a triumph by others only dreamed of. The Village is so scientifically arranged that it moves of its own accord—an ingenious arrangement of a little water and a light weight. It is one piece of complicated machinery put into harmonious action producing an effect which must be seen to be even imagined. Combined with it is Professor Boyer's "Automatic Exhibition," another piece of wonderful construction, mysterious and phenomenal in every sense of the words. It is an exhibition in which we feel that no matter how vividly portrayed the pen can but touch as to its marvel and as to doing justice to it, is entirely inadequate. We have witnessed it and can and do assure the people of Bellefonte that they will never regret it if they do the same.

Within the past few months the quietude of our city has been disturbed by the frequent attempted robberies. Some of them were pretty bold but the latest and what was probably the boldest we have ever heard of was that attempted at the residence of William Hart, the clothing man, on East Bishop street on Wednesday evening. The thief secured his booty but before he could get away he had to give it up again.

It was about half past eight o'clock when a stranger was seen loitering in the neighborhood of Mr. Hart's home and Robert Taylor who was sitting on a porch nearby came to the conclusion that the man was there for no good purpose and determined to watch him.

An umberella was standing on Mr. Hart's porch and this the wily thief soon had in his posession. Taylor saw it was about time to make himself known and quickly closing up on the burglar he demanded that he return the umberella and then make himself scarce. The culprit saw he was clearly caught and after a moment's hesitation gave up the stolen property and departed for sections unknown. Had it not been that Mr. Taylor happened to witness the theft, there is no telling what would have been taken away by the bold intruder.

These occurences are becoming entirely too frequent and something should be done to protect our citizens from these violators of the peace. A man who will commit robbery will kill to prevent capture and it is not just to our citizens that they are not fully protected.

The Lock Haven Democrat says: A young man who claims to be a tea selling agent has swindled a number of women in nearby towns, and as he may be coming this way it behoves Lock Haven women to be on the lookout for him. The scheme is to persuade the lady of the house to buy a pound of tea at 80 cents, promising to give her a parlor lamp as a premium. He also sells tea at $1.35 per pound, with which he promises to give in addition to the lamp a smaller one. The gifts, he says, will arrive by express the following Saturday. COLD IN HEAD

Bedford July, 9.—The morning session of the Bar association was devoted to the consideration of papers read last night and special business that had been referred to this meeting by the association at prior sessions. Courtland Parker, of New Jersey, addressed the association this morning. Eureka Chemical & Mfg., Co., La Crosse Wis.—Gentlemen: For forty years I used tobacco in all its forms. For twenty-five years of that time I was a great sufferer from general debility and heart disease. For fifteen years I tried to quit, but couldn't. I took various remedies, among others "No-To-Bac," "The Indian Tobacco Antidote," "Double Chloride of Gold," etc., etc., but none of them did me the least bit of good. Finally, however, I purchased a box of your "Baco-Curo" and it has entirely cured me of the habit in all its forms, and I have increased thirty pounds in weight and am relieved from all the numerous aches and pains of the body and mind. I could write a quire of paper upon my changed feelings and condition.

Yours respectfully, P. H. Marbury.

No More Free Transit

Chicago, July 9.—Railroad companies no longer may carry their business letters over their own roads without paying postage to the government. An order has been received from Postmaster-General Wilson by Maj. Stewart and Postmaster Hesing insisting upon the enforcement of postal laws against railways carrying their own letters.

The railroads, however will not be required to mail their letters as ordinary citizens and corporations. They will be supplied by the government with a specially stamped envelope, which they must cancel on delivery to the train man. The express companies have been using such envelopes for some years.

A Colored Preacher Arrested.

Uniontown, Pa., July 5.—"Rev." R. E. Brown, a colored preacher, who recently held a big camp meeting here, is now in the county jail, charged with false pretense and the prosecutor is John T. Green, a colored constable. Green claims that Brown hired him to preserve order at the meetings, saying he had money in the bank. He did not keep his promise, and it is alleged that his tale of wealth was false. This brought about the arrest.

A Big Snake Story.

A Lycoming county woman on going to cut some meat, found a big snake lying coiled around some glass jars. She and her sister tried to kill it, but failed, and were compelled to call the lady's husband. He dispatched the reptile, which proved to be a rattler four feet long and having thirteen rattles. The Williamsport Sun is authority for this story.

Her Fan.

Flutter of feathers and perfume of laces,
Carved sticks of ivory, daintily white;
Plump little Cupids, with michievous faces—
Ah, could I but read your expression aright!

Say, do you know, are you wholly unfeeling,
As you pelt one another with roses so sweet?
Do you not know that my heart she is stealing,
To trample it under her pearly shod feet?

Almost I think you exult in the glances
Your owner bestows when she seeks to enslave,
Know you no cure for wounds from love's lances?
Have you no power her victims to save?

Swiftly she whirls in the maze of the dances;
Slyly you laugh as you peep from each fold,
And thus one more victim of coquetry's fancies
Questions in vain—his fate is untold.

—Lucy Mayo Warner in Boston Budget

Sewickley, Pa., July 10.—The snake season is at its heighth in Sewickley valley, Hugh Pearce, a youth living on Sewickley creek, accompanied by a companion, went out to pick some berries for their evening meal. The berry patch is about a mile away from the home of the lads. They had almost completed their task when a copperhead snake struck Pearce on the great toe of the right foot.

The boy, who is only twelve years old, recognized the snake as a death dealer, and, forgetting his own safety attempted to kill it. The copperhead escaped under a log and upon the same log Pearce sat down and taking his toe in his mouth, at once sucked the wound. The treatment he continued until he arrived at his home. When he arrived there his parents at once sent for Dr. James McCready of Sewickley, and in the meantime the lad drank a pint of whiskey.

When Dr. McCready arrived the boy was unconscious, and remained in this condition for nearly two hours. The doctor at once saw that it was a question whether the whiskey or the snakebite was the more dangerous. He incised the wound and applied permanganate of potash and perscribed the usual internal remedies. While the doctor was attending his patient, the boy who was with Pearce when struck by the snake, accompanied by another lad found the reptile within a few yards of where it had bitten its victim. They were successful in killing it and bringing it to the doctor, who found that it measured 18 inches. It was a male and its sacks were full of poison. Young Pearce is rapidly recovering from the effects of the poison, and the swelling in the leg is slowly reducing. He will be all right in a few days.

Pearce is the fourth person within the last half dozen years that has been bitten by copperhead snakes in that vacinity.

One bite alone proved fatal, but it is thought that if medical assistance had been called in time such would not have been the case. The Sewickley hills are full of these venomous reptiles. Some time ago a Sewickley man visited a child who had been bitten by one of these snakes and stopped at the residence of Capt. Palmer, postmaster at Haysville. The captain showed him eight copperheads that he had killed that morning a short distance from his house. Capt. Palmer had them hanging on bush and spoke of them as if it were an everyday occurrence.

A Trip to the Clouds.

Prince Leo Stevens journeyed in his silken car to the clouds on Wednesday afternoon, and when over a thousand feet from the ground he cut loose from the balloon and with his frail looking parachute, shot down to the earth again 'mid the plaudits of the thousands of spectator.

It was a gala day for Centre county. The special trains fairly groaned beneath the heavy burdens they brought to this city. People came from miles around to witness the wonderful ascension and long before the appointed hour the streets were lined. They came, and they saw, and there was not one but who said it was, without exception, the finest balloon ascension ever made in Central Pennsylvania.

The place of ascension was from the Public Square and there was gathered the largest crowd. For over a block away, on all sides, people were wedged in like bees, and standing room was at a premium. Space had been roped off in the centre in order that the balloonists would not be hindered in their work of preparation, but even this could hardly keep the immense throng of spectators back.

Some little time was taken in getting the monster air ship ready, but the crowd was patient and all were convinced that they would be more than repaid for their time and trouble. The inflating of the balloon was commenced and soon the large silken structure was ready for use.

The supports were dropped to one side and the final touches given and then the signal was given to start. The balloon shot up into the air as if fired from a cannon; and almost before the bewildered spectators could look again "Prince Leo" was rising rapidly above the housetops and smilingly bidding his friends adieu from his dangerous seat on the thin trapeze. With him was "Bob," the little dog known by everybody in town.

The aerial travellers went up a distance of about five hundred feet when a northwestern current carried them about a quarter of a mile from town. When at a distance of eight hundred feet a parachute was cut loose and "Bob" commenced his downward career. Unfortunately he struck some telephone wires, tearing his harness from the parachute, and he fell to the ground below. He was dead when picked up, but there was a look of satisfactiun on his face, as much as to say that he had died "higher" than any other dog in Pennsylvania.

Meanwhile the eyes of the spectators were following "Prince Leo." Higher and higher he rose, and when he had reached a distance of over a thousand feet from the earth he cut loose. Like a stone he shot down for many feet, when his parachute opened up and then, as gently and gracefully as a bird, he sailed towards the ground. During all this time he sat perfectly composed on the trapeze apparently not half as much concerned as his awe-striken spectators below. After a journey of five minutes he alighted on Half Moon Hill safe and sound. A large crowd was there to greet him and he was loudly cheered and congratulated upon his thrilling feat. Leaping into a carriage "Prince Leo" drove to his hotel followed by hundreds of admirers, who were unstinting in their praises and who rent the air with their cheers as the plucky aeronaut modestly appeared to acknowledge his thanks. It was the unanimous verdict of the thousands of spectators that "Prince Leo" is indeed the most wonderful aeronaut that has ever visited this section of the state.

Penns Valley Items.

The county political contest has begun, and after the Chicago convention we will have the national campaign in addition. Of course, gold bugs and silver insects, will be about as numerous as our ordinary fire fly, I almost said roaches. Evidently our national contest will be fought, on the question of finance, gold or white metal unquestionable the democracy, as a party, are drifting bodily towards silver. In these valleys nine out of ten democrats lean that way, and are only waiting for the Chicago nominee and platform, to be announced to tumble right on it, and no doubt in the tumble the tenth democrat will follow suit. The county nominations are gaining in favor, although when first announced some republicans became sullen and out of humor because they thought the Penns valley side of the mountain had been slighted and harshly treated. There is no use of denying the fact that Long of Gregg township was the choice of the republicans of this valley for treasurer, being a well known business man, and right here in this Gibralter of Democracy, thoroughly capable to cope successfully with the democratic nominee in popularity and influence. Of course, the disappointment naturally soured the disposition of his friends for the time being. But, this is wearing off and all are now following into line to meet the "common foe," under the magical banner of McKinley and gold—and our whole county ticket.

The Fourth of July was celebrated through the valley rather quietly, occasionally one could hear the report of a pistol among the boys, the shooting of fire crackers and exploding torpedoes were the favorite amusements.

The Junior base ball club of Spring Mills passed through the valley, on their return home on Saturday evening last in high glee. They had been to Rebersburg and had quite an exciting contest, with the Brush valley lads and were victorious. The score being 5 to 9 in their favor.

The Millheim telephone company have a controversey with the Penna. R. R. Co. The latter cut the telephone wires crossing their tracks, at Spring Mills. (The wires were elevated twenty five feet.) The Pennsylvania railroad company in securing the wires—instead of cutting them immediately over their tracks did it at a pole located on other property. Isn't this a trespass?

Farmers through here are cutting wheat. Some fields prove very fair, while others hardly pay to cut; corn and oats look fine; hay will be a failure. Potatoes and apples give promise of a large yield.

State Appropriations.

On Tuesday last State Treasurer Haywood began the payment of the state appropriation to the thousand of public school districts in the state. The appropriation for last year was based on the triannual return made in 1892, but the present appropriation is to be paid in proportion to the number of taxables in 1895.

The counties entitled to an increase in appropriation as compared with that paid the last three years are Allegheny, Armstrong' Beaver, Cambria, Delaware, Elk, Erie, Forest Fulton, Jefferson, Juniata, Lawrence, Luzerne, Mercer, Mifflin, Northumberland, Philadelphia, Somerset, Sullivan, Washington, Wayne, Westmoreland, and York.

Blair county gets $20,355,41, Cambria, $64,473,48, Clearfield $74,084, Centre $48,410.62, and Huntingdon $34,017. In many country districts throughout the state there exists great dissatisfaction as to the manner of the distribution of this appropriation the weight of public opinion favoring payment on the basis of the number of children actually attending the public schools and it is more than probable that the state legislature will once more be urged to change the distribution to the ratio of the children to be educated in the public schools.

A Phase of Woman's Suffrage, as Looked at from a S. Carolina Woman's Point of View.

VIRGINIA D. YOUNG.

Inasmuch as every woman, as well as every man, has a spark of the God breath we call Soul, whose growth depends on expression by recognition, there seems to me a very cogent reason why she would be endowed with the ballot as a means to this spiritual expansion.

Woman, with her present limitations in South Carolina, reminds me of a bit of sweet majoram, the seed of which has become imbedded under the brick with which we border our garden beds. The seed has come up under these adverse conditions, and in its effort toward the light twisted itself partly from under the brick; but the twist between the root and the body of the plant interferes mightily with the perfect development of its life.

So under the brick of conservative prejudice, the powers of our women though fostered by the new opportunities of open colleges and universities, suffer from a mental twist that prevents perfect growth.

Since the very foundation of freedom is the power to stand alone, we have to contend with the inculcation of the opposite idea into the feminine mind from infancy described by the words 'dependent and clinging.' It seems queer that we do not take in the analogies by which nature writes her object-lessons. In the green world of the forest we see that the tree which leans is the tree that is weak, and which never attains the height and power of its neighbor, erect and solitary; while clinging things blight and dwarf the object about which they twine

Surely if we congratulate our girls of today on their upright, strong figures, we may also glory in their power to stand alone.

Emerson's 'Mush of Concession' describes the attitude of the disfranchised woman, who 'has all the rights she wants,' and is not ashamed of her indifference to the want of all rights suffered by her sisters of a common humanity. A natural offshoot of the clinging woman is the echo tribe of women.

There is nothing that more quickly palls upon the mind and dazes the brain than to have one's words taken up and repeated in accents feebler and more monotonous by people who are too lazy and negative to think for themselves.

And what chance is there for the battledore and shuttlecock of conservatism when one party is the mere echo of the other?

The brave heart of the true woman that holds fast to its convictions and declares them, despite ridicule and opposition, in the face of the sun, by that very act reaches a vantage ground of larger soul development.

—Various newspapers have been taking up and adding to an original observation by the Buffalo Times to the effect that, man like a watch, is known by his works. "And by the hours he keeps," remarks the Troy Press. As well as by the spring in him, declares the Yonkers Evening Gazette. And by the way he uses his hands, adds the Whitehall Times. The Nyack Star remarks that he is sometimes fast, while the Tenafly Record notes that he sometimes has wheels, and the New York Observer declares that he does not always go when you want him to. The Independent believes that a man is like a watch because both need to be on guard, but have vested rights, and both go on tick If they do sooner or later run down.—Tyrone Times. But not before 'Uncle' has become tired of their presence.

We are inclined to think he is 'either open faced or a hard case.'

Lightning Was Lively.

Easton, Pa., July 9.—Lightning played strange pranks here to-day, injuring a number of persons and terrifying hundreds of others. A thunder bolt shocked Walter Ritchen and Grant Abbot, post-office employes. Charles Long's house in Easton was struck by lightning and the cupola ex-Senator Pyle's home was knocked off. J. J. Carey, employed by the Lehigh Valley railroad was struck by lightning and was paralyzed. E. A. Nenning, his son Frank and an employe, Fenztermacher were all shocked by a bolt. Edward Troxell was also shocked and County Treasurer Hemminway barely escaped a similar fate.

The State Bar Meeting.

Bedford, July 8.—The Pennsylvania State Bar association convened here at 10:30 o'clock this morning with over 200 lawyers present. The president, Samuel Dickens, Esq., of Philadelphia, delivered an interesting address on 'Legislative Restraint The executive committee made its report, showing a membership of over 500 The afternoon session was devoted to a consideration of proposed legislation. An act to regulate practice in the supreme court was discussed by the association, and the action, which proposes to make the losing party pay the cost of printing the record of both sides, met with vigorous opposition.

The act providing for the appointment of a legislative commission, whose duty shall be to assist in the preparation or all bills submitted to the legislature, was approved. The proposed libel law met with considerable opposition in the form in which it was presented. The association favors a more perfect libel law, but the proposed measure was too full of inconsistencies to meet with much favor.

The report of the committee on legal education received very warm support, and it is likely that legislation will be enacted on the basis proposed by the committee. The evening session was consumed by addresses from Cortland Parker of New Jersey, W. B. Rodgers, Esq., of Pittsburg, and William Tricket dean of the Dickson Law school at Carlisle.

WEEKLY FINANCIAL REVIEW

From our Regular Correspondent.

New York; July 12, 1896.

Following the "bear" assaults of the first week of the month, Wall Street has fallen into a state of virtual inertness. The late speculative sellers seem to have exhausted their force; and, on the other hand buying on London account has diminished The market is thus left to drift, little affected by either bad influences or good. Outside of the disturbing political factors, there is the usual Summer absence of operators many of whom have closed up their accounts until the progress of the election canvass has thrown new light upon the prospect.

The extraordinary excitement connected with the Chicago Convention has had less effect than might have been expected. It has been enough to suggest some grave thoughts to reflecting; but it has been regarded as tending to complicate or endanger sound money prospects. Undoubtedly, it is no small matter to see such a large mass of our people given over to the wildest conceptions about which they have no rational conception and which most of them are unable to understand. But it is felt that this exaggerated excitement must have its reaction, and that it will tend to swell the vote of the sober majority who have no sympathy with demagogic and communistic vagaries. The Chicago Convention has given the country to understand that the Democratic party has now espoused populism among its issues. That was hardly expected to be the outcome; but the platform is nothing if not populistic. Sober, intelligent, order loving people can now understand what lies under the prevailing discontent and the baseless sectionalism of the South and West; and the fact that one of the parties in the election will be the open abettors of revolutionary tendencies will only tend to swell the overwhelming majority that in November, will show these malcontent elements what is their real standing among the American people.

The spirit of the Chicago Convention is an affront to every conservative and patriotic sentiment in the heart of our people It is the sort of temper out of which comes lawlessness, conspiracy and revolution. The classes whom the planks are intended to inflame know nothing of the real ends of their leaders. The more inflaming and revoluntionary the party program is the better it suits the militant mood into which these unreflecting masses have been worked. There is no mistaking the real tactics of the party leaders. Conscious of the danger that their selfish scheme of making a home market for the silver may be overwhelmingly voted down at the election, they marshal a host of side issues out of which they may excite popular discontent and awaken the mob spirit and frighten the orderly supporters of sound money in to surrender. Their game is transparent and well understood and excites no concern among the classes against whom it is directed. They stand unmoved upon the foundation of common sense and common honesty which has never failed to shield the country from the shock of civil discontents. The more open the temptations or the threats of demagogic leaders, the more ready our people have ever been to come to the rescue; and the spirit of the dictation of the Chicago Convention were just the incentives needed to rally the friends of Ameritan principles and institutions for overwhelming defense. Hence the public readily perceive that the Democratic Convention has made certain the election of the party of sound money and honest finance in November. In this sense, the political situation is both clearer and safer to-day than it was a week ago, and confidence is more solid. McKinley will undoubtedly be elected, in which event the gold standard will be maintained; our international credit will be sustained, our securities will be strong, holders both at home and abroad, panic will be averted, and a boom will be inaugurated, not only in Wall Street, but throughout our broad land, with which on old-time revival can compare in point of prosperity.

FASHIONS AT SARATOGA

Early Morning Costumes; Midday Dresses; Large Hats; Hair Dressing.

An entire independence regarding costume, is a peculiar charm in Saratoga life; extremes in opposite directions affording a constant gray linen suits, with either blazer or eton jackets, trimmed with embroidered linen bands, small buttons at the corners of sailor collars, back finished by a flowered ribbon knot with a long end. Six or eight fancy fronts to one dress give a constant variety, and tucked white muslin or lawn fronts are new and inexpensive the tucks running crosswise in waists, fronts or sleeves. White piques are very popular here as breakfast dresses, the prettiest having a row of insertion around the jacket and double reveres about an inch and a half from the edge; a pink or blue silk front adding the necessary touch of color. As a matter of course, pretty shirt waists and black skirts are seen on all sides.

LATER IN THE DAY.

Organdy, grass linen or silk dresses begin to come out, and then criticism by one's neighbors is to be expected. A plain apple green silk dress, worn by a lovely blonde, made round waist, with white lace bretelles, very full on the shoulders, a green velvet belt and collar, looked so sweet and simple. among the figured organdies and chine silks in its immediate vicinity. The hat worn with this costume was of pure white fancy straw with green tulle bunched high and full in front held by two pearl buckles, and a large pink rose was placed at each side. Just back of the two roses, two green "Bird of Paradise" plumes dropped over at either side. At the back were puffings of tulle and pink roses enough to trim an ordinary hat. A white chiffon parasol and long white gloves, completed the lovely ensemble.

spend almost the whole day out of doors, just going within long enough to change their costumes, and groups of ladies sitting on hotel piazzas or under the beautiful trees with with which Saratoga abounds, desist from their fancy work or other interesting pastimes, to discuss the merits of the new food product Samatose; supplying the now recognized want of something more substantial for nourishing invalids than beef broths, which contain certain extractive matters of meat, but not the albumins which are essential to the development of bawn and muscle. Somatose contains these indispensible albuminoug elements in a concentrated state, and prepared in such manner, that they will be readily digested, absorbed and utilized in the system. It is a tasteless and odorless powder; easily disolved in milk tea, coffee or other fluids. It can be given for long periods without exciting repugnance even in fastiduous persons or children; the prompt gain in flesh and strength following its administration, is a sufficient proof of its value as a nutrient and restorative.

Cool evenings bring out rich materials, and since the coronation of the Czar, the general popularity of velvet has increased. The beautiful forest green veluntina costume worn by a young society matron, attracted attention even here from the lovely shade and richness of the fabric, second only to the personal beauty of the wearer. The skirt was plain, and not extremely wide, with short basque lined with pale pink silk; pink chiffon front; epaulets of of Ventian lace over the sleeves, and two side pieces, shaped like pocket flaps, attached to the basque at either side of the front. If hats become much larger, the space occupied by the fashionable women, will be a matter of consideration. Some hats are tilted far over the forehead, as a consequence of the flowers at the back, which in their turn force the hair very low down, almost on the neck. Wide taffata ribbon loops, in clusters at the sides, with tulle at the centre, and ribbon at the extreme back constitute the trimming of a Parisian hat, displayed here by an extreme fashionist. Stylish coiffeurs are low and very broad, fluffy hair standing out at the sides, and the Pompadour roll is effected by all who can stand the ordeal, and a good many who cannot.

Baked Bananas.

Some people think that baked bananas are a great luxury. Strip down a quarter section of the outside peeling, and with a knife press open the fruit a little the whole length. Sprinkle all liberally with granulated sugar, squeeze over the sugar a lemon's juice, lay the skin back and place the bananas in a baking pan and bake for fifteen minutes. Serve hot in the skins. Of course you should select perfect fruit and wash well before baking.

Both are Liable.

A man and wife are both liable for the payment for a newspaper which is taken and read in the family. British Sentiment on the Nomination of Mr. McKinley.

The work of the Republican convention at St. Louis hardly seems to have been any more acceptable to the newspapers of England than it was to their un-American allies in this country. Judging by the comments cabled here, the nomination of Mr. McKinley had been accepted as a foregone conclusion. It would have been strange had it been otherwise. Nobody knows any better than the English people the abolition of American protection has been even more disasterous to us than it has been to them. While they have reaped the lion's share of the benefits that the Democratic Free-Trade Tariff gave to foreign countries, our loss has aggregated the gains of other countries as well as those of the United Kingdom. While Americans were stupidly foolish to authorize the transfer of our posperity to Europe, they were not so foolish as to desire that it should be a permanant transfer, hence at the earliest opportunity, they acknowledge their error by honoring the representative of our best Protective Tariff, thus intimating a desire for a restoration of the policy of the protection.

The Englishmen of course see the point. The London Globe, June 17, declares "that the election of McKinley to the presidency would be a grievous mistake to the commerce of great Britain inasmuch as there is no reason to presume that he is not strongly in favor of restoring the Tariff which Mr. Cleveland scaled down." Naturally so. Mr. McKinley is as strongly opposed to our effecting Tariff legislation that would benefit "the commerce of Great Britain" as Mr. Cleveland was in favor of doing so. And, conversely the British business men would never think of banqueting Mr. McKinley as they did Mr. Wilson, the representative of the Free Trade idea that benefits 'the commerce of Great Britain."

The different views of the effect of a Protective Tariff, as expressed by the Free Trade papers printed in England and in America, have often been noted. Despite all past experince and previous proof to the contrary, the un-American Free Trade papers continne to claim that a Protective Tariff will prevent any increase in our revenue. The London Globe on the other hand, speaks of "the re-imposition of an extremely high Protective Tariff as the only means of averting bankruptcy." The English papers are invariably the more honestly out-spoken. The bluntness takes the place of the cunning deceit and crafty falsehoods that are so necessary to the advocate of a Tariff for England in this country. Another instance of British bluntness is given by the Westminster Gazette, of June 19, as follows:

The Protection policy to which the party is committed will doubtless be as injurious to our trade as before.

The Democratic papers here were never honest enough to acknoweledge that our protection policy was injurious to British trade. They were aware of it, but in trying to destroy it they used arguments which they knew to be false, that it was injurious to the United States. It is refreshing to read the British beliefs. They are so frankly and honestly expressed, and it is far more satirfactory to fight an honest foe out in the open that it is to have to deal with a snake in the grass. The London correspondent of the New York Tribune cabled, on June 19, that "the English press with a few notable exceptions, have an under tone of predjudice against Mr. McKinley, as might be expected from his record as an uncompromising Protectionist". That is right. The bulk of the British press knows that American Free-Trade would insure to British benefit, hence their dislike for an American Protectionist. The "few notable exceptions" are those English papers that are beginning to appreciate that a policy of protection is becoming necessary to the supremacy, or even maintainance, of British trade and commerce. In a few years the "few notable exceptions" will comprise only the British Free Trade papers. Finally we commend the following, from the London Globe of June 17, to the attention of the Democratic chieftains and Democratic editors who favor a Free Trade policy for the United States.

When the fiscal system associated with his (Mr. McKinley's) name operated in the States, many branches of British trade suffered severely by loss of American custom But no sooner was the Tariff modified by Mr. Cleveland than they began to recover these losses and in some instances even gained ground.

There is no thought of the currency questions in this. It is a plain and solid statement that the American policy of Protection is injurious to British trade, and that the un-American policy of Free Trade is beneficial to British commerce.

Death of Niagara Falls.

Fifteen hundred years ago the terrestrial movements raised the Johnson bar reir to the Erie basin so high the waters of that lake reached not merely the level of Lake Michigan, but the point of turning all the waters of the upper lake into the Mississippi drainage by way of Chicago. But the falls were then cutting through the ridge, and when this was accomplished, before the change in drainage was completed, the surface of Lake Erie was suddenly lowered by many feet, and thus the falls were reestablished for some time longer.

Slowly, year by year, one sees the cataract wearing back and suggesting the time when the river will be turned into a series of rapids; but another silent cause is at work, and one not easily seen—namely, the effects of the changing level of the earth's crust. From the computations already referred to it was found that for the first twenty-four thousand years of the life of the river only the Erie waters flowed by way of the Niagara river, and for only eight thousand years have all the waters of the upper lakes been feeding the falls. If the terrestrial movements continue as at present, and there appears no reason to doubt it, for the continent was vastly higher than now, then in about five thousand years the rim of the Erie basin promises to be raised so high that all the waters of the upper lakes will flow out by way of the Chicago canal. Thus the duration of Niagara falls will have continued about thirty-seven thousand years. But the lakes will endure beyond the calculations of the boldest horologist.—Popular Science Monthly.

Shirt Waists.

The newest shirt waists are tucked across the fronts the depth of a yoke, and have a corresponding number of tucks running around the tops of the sleeves in a direct line from those in the yoke, and the very novel one has the whole sleeve tucked up side down in half inch tucks, every tuck falling out slightly, from its own weight. There is a new lining cloth, which is called ribbon cloth, which has a pretty gloss, and comes in all the delicate colors, and is very suitable for using under organdies and lawns, when taffeta is too expensive.

The blouse fronts and puffed sleeve tops of organdy and lawn gowns are given a novel effect by insertions of lace run in diamond form all over them. It requires dainty fingers and patience to do the work, but the effect is so pretty and unique that it pays. —From "Review of Fashions," in Demorests's Magazine for July.

They Left Suddenly.

"On a recent Sunday" says the Wyoming County Herald, "while services were in progress in a church in a nearby town, what appeared to be a black and white cat bolted through the door and ran swiftly down the church pursued by a dog. The fugitive took refuze in the pulpit and the preacher taken unawares in the middle of his discourse did the natural thing, kicked the cat, hit it, and landed it in the congregation. It turned out that the cat was a skunk. The congregation didn't wait to sing the doxology.

"You Don't Become a Slave to their Use!"

The above words have been truthfully spoken concerning Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets by one who has had abundant opportunity to observe their more favorable action as compared with that of other pills.

Most pills and medicines in use for constipation, in the long run, "make a bad matter worse." Unlike such agents, Dr. Pierce's Pellets exert such a tonic or strengthening effect upon the membranes of the stomach and bowels, as to produce lasting benefit. Their use can, therefore, be gradually discontinued. With most pills the longer they are taken, the more dependent upon their use the patient becomes. Not so with the "Pellets." Their secondary effect is to keep the bowels open and regular, not to further constipate. Hence, their great popularity with sufferers from habitual constipation.

The Pellets cure costiveness, or constipation, biliousness, sick and bilious headache, dizziness, sour stomach, loss of appetite, coated tongue, indigestion, or dyspepsia, windy belchings, "heartburn," pain and distress after eating, and kindred derangements of the liver, stomach and bowels. One little "Pellet" is a laxative, two are mildly cathartic.

They are tiny, sugar-coated granules; any child will readily take them. Sold by all dealers.

An Indian Relic.

Mayor Mayer is the recipient of an Indian relic of which he is justly proud. It is a cane made of cedar, the handle of which is a deer horn. On the cane are tacked several pieces of varied colored ribbon. The cane was made by Great Bear, the chief of the Winnebagos, a tribe that is now nearly extinct, and was given by that warrior to Dr. I. N. Canfield, formerly of this city, but who now resides at Necedah, Wis. The physician sent the cane to the mayor of this city.—Lock Haven Democrat.

A Jury Composed of Women.

Such an announcement may seem strange, but it is a fact The jury was an immense one to, and the trial has lasted for many years. We refer to the trial of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. As to its merits, there has been unanimous verdict rendered in its favor. Indeed it would be impossible to get together any number of ladies who had given it a trial who could come to any other conclusion.

It cures ulcerations, displacements, moves the tendency to caducous affections and corrects all unnatural discharges. To those about to become mothers, it is a real boon, for it lessons the pains and perils of childbirth, promotes the secretion of an abundence of nourishment for the child and shortens the period of confinement.

A Physician's Suicide.

Uniontown, July 14.—Dr. John Reisinger, a well known physician of town, fired a bullet into his brain at noon to-day with suicidal intent. His aim was good, the bullet entering back of his right ear, penetrating his brain and lodging it in the flesh on the left side. That the wound did not produce instant death is a puzzle to Dr. J. B. Ewing, who was called to attend the wounded man. Dr. Reisinger has been incurable ill for some time.

THE ARMY WORM.

Suggestions Offered to Prevent Their Spread.

Zoologist B. H. Warren, of the state board of agriculture, in a circular letter giving a description of the army worm, which pest is now making havoc, in farmers' fields, says that the fully developed worm is a little over an inch long, of a gray or dingy black color with black stripes and narrow lines of white on the back, and the under surface is of a more or less greenish color, the head is smooth and yellowish, with two black lines running from top to mouth. It has sixteen legs, and those from the middle of the body are marked with a shiny black or blackish band. The worms when disturbed curl themselves up like "cut worms" and drop to the ground. They complete their growth in about one month, at the end of which period they burrow into the ground and each caterpillar changes into a pupa, from which in two or three weeks the moth emerges. The female moth is said to lay about 750 minute and white eggs, and these hatch in from eight to ten days.

To prevent their spread the best authorities recommend the mowing of a wide swath around the invaded field, then plow a deep furrough with the straight side toward the part to be protected, and at intervals of a few feet make holes with a crow-bar, or dig small pits into which the worms entrapped will fall.

Where the number of worms is very great and the ditch becomes partially filled, plow a second furrow throwing the earth over into the fiart furrow, thus covering up the worms and providing a second line of defense.

Some authorities recommend the use of kerosene sprinkled over the worms entrapped in the ditch and and thereby destroy them; others use a light covering of straw which is set on fire and accomplish the same result.

It is also recommended that ordinary fence boards be set on edge, end to end, across their path, and then apply a coating of tar or kerosene to this wooden barrier, which checks their progress. Some entomologists recommend spraying of grass ahead of the worms with Paris green, thus poisoning the forage on which they subsist. For this purpose 1 lb. of Paris green to 150 to 200 gallons of water is a proper proportion.

The most effective method seems to be the constructing of a ditch with a plow, as stated above, cutting the side next to the part to be protected perpendicular, and then attending to the destruction of the worms as they are entraped in the ditch

Country Readers the Best Readers.

The country newspaper of good standing, clean columns and fair circulation is the best advertising medium on earth. Its readers as a rule have time to read and do read what the business man who gets a daily and 'skims' it over never thinks of reading, viz: the advertisements. Mr. H. C. Yeager is the popular host of the Brant House at the corner of Allegheny and Bishop Streets. Complaining of his back one day to Mr. M. Cunningham, he of local and foreign pavement fame, "Mine Host" was advised to try the old Quaker remedy. He took the contractors advice and procured the first box of Doan's Kidney Pills at Green's Pharmacy. This is what he has to say about it. "My kidneys have been faulty for years. I have read a great deal about how the organs work, what is good for them and what is bad for them. Experience is a great teacher and I have had my share. A friend advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I got a box. It helped me so much that I got a second and I am still using them. It is rather a difficult job to cure a man whose blood is saturated with uric acid, who has rheumatism and urinary disorder due to weak kidneys and bladder and who has become a chronic victim. Still in spite of it all, Doan's Kidney Pills have helped me. I am much better in every way and it is quite possible if I persist in the treatment as I intend doing I may be eventually cured. If I continue to progress as I have in the past that will be the ultimate end. I can recommend Doan's Kidney Pills for kidney trouble."

CAUSED A SENSATION.

Ex-City Attorney Moreland of Pittsburg, Pleads Guilty.

Pittsburg, July 13.—The second trial of ex-City Attorney W. C. Moreland and his assistant, W. H. House, charged with misappropriating money, said to rightfully belong to the city of Pittsburg, was called in the quarter sessions court today before Judges Porter and Kennedy. Messrs. Moreland and House has been jointly indicted for embezzlement. The amount specifically stated in the nine counts presented today was $26,625.74 and covers the last four years of official acts of the defendants. This covers all of the shortage on which the commonwealth is said to be able to secure positive evidence, but does not, in fact, approach the total of the amounts unaccounted for during the twelve years which the defendants were in charge of the city's legal department.

The first trial of the defendants was held in February last resulted in acquittal. They then answered the charge of depositing city funds for private gain in the Trades men's National bank. Every seat in the court room was occupied long before the case was called. Mr. House occupied a seat at the attorney's table, but Major Moreland was not present. When Mr. Moreland was called upon to enter his plea Harry Goehring, representing counsel for Mr. Moreland, addressed the court, saying:

"May it please your honor we wish to enter a plea of guilty for Mr. Moreland."

The court accepted the plea and the attorney quickly left the room. The totally unexpected developments caused a sensation.

The trial of Mr. House was immediately taken up. The seclection of a jury occupied the time of the court until the noon recess.

Major Moreland was seen at his private law office but refused to talk for publication. His bond will be renewed at once. The maximum penalty attached to Major Moreland's confessed crime is five years imprisonment, or fine covering the amount of the city's claim against him.

Swapping Stamps With a Czar.

Some time ago the attention of a Philadelphia mother was attracted to her little boy by the fact that he lay at full length on the library floor, evidently deeply involved in the intricacies of letter writing. All inquiries as to the purport and proposed destination of the laborous production failed to elicit further remark than an advice to "wait awhile." At last the missive ended with a scrawling superscription and an immense sigh of relief, and it was proudly borne to the father and mother that they might be afforded an opportunity of expressing their entire approbation which was evidently expected.

Imagine their surprise when their eyes fell upon the following:

"Dear Czar:—Since the death of your father you must have received a great deal of foreign postage stamps on letters sent by your friends who were sorry for you. I am collecting postage stamps, and if you will send me a lot of yours I will send you some American ones in return."

The parents at first laughed at the idea, but the little man was so evidently pleased with this idea of his young brain, that they finally determined to allow him to mail it, never imagining that it would really fall beneath the royal gaze.

With both parents and child the thing was fast becoming a thing of the forgotten past, when the mail of a few mornings ago brought the young fellow a rather bulky envelope, bearing upon it the seal and arms of the royal house of Russia. To the little fellow's delight he found, upon opening it, that it was packed with stamps of all nationalities.

The labored missive had evidently reached its destination, and had spelled out to the heart of the man, in all the excitement of his coronation ceremonies, such a message of childish innocence as made refusal impossible.

—The Philadelphia Record tells of a school teacher who was instructing a class of boys in geography. Everything went well until, in order to make the matter plainer, she took an ordinary globe, and pointed to the portion containing the United States, asked her class where she would come out if she would start from Philadelphia and go straight through the earth. She knew they would all say China but she wanted to see which of her scholars would answer first. She waited fully a minute, and no answer came. Away back in the room a grimy hand was finally help up. "Well, David," she asked, "where would I come out if I should go straight through the earth from here?" The silence was growing thicker every second. "Please, Miss Maude, you would come out the hole," was the reply, and the class in geography was dismissed for the day.

A Breezy Irishman.

Penrose Fitzgerald, the member of parliament for Cambridge, is a breezy popular Irishman, of whom many good stories are told. He is rather nearsighted, and seldom remembers names. A few days ago he met a fellow member of parliament Viscount Kilcoursie, who has just become Earl of Cavan. The new earl spoke to Mr. Fitzgerald in the lobby and, observing a puzzled look, was good enough to say pleasantly: "I see you don't know who I am. My name is Cavan." "Of course, of course, my dear fellow," was the answer, "but for the moment, I admit, I took you for that ass Kilcoursie."

As Others See Us.

That the United States is forging to the front as a naval power in the world has become a recognized fact, but the public generally are not aware of the real standing of this part of our government. Lord Brassey, who is widely acknowledged as an authority on naval matters, in his latest "Naval Annual" places the United States fourth on the list of naval powers. It is preceded by Great Britain, France and Russia, and is followed by Germany, Italy and Japan in the order named. Besides this it is pointed out that the United States also ranks fourth in the matter of annual naval expenditure, including new building; that it is steadily increasing its naval strength and that it is apparently determined to rival the most powerful of the European fleets. Our new battle ships and cruisers are spoken of in terms of admiration, and the admission is made that they would be found capable of holding their own with the very best of their respective types in the navies of Europe.

A few figures will give a general idea of the comparative strength of the fleets of the world. For example, of battle ships and armored vessels generally Great Britain has 81, France 57, Russia 42, Italy 22, Germany 35, and the United States 32. In cruisers protected and unprotected Great Britain has 83, France 25, Russia 6, Italy 17, Germany 8, and the United States 34. Additional significance is also given to these figures from the fact that while many of the battle ships of Europe are of a type that is obsolete, ours are of the latest and most powerful design and construction.

—The Hollidaysburg councilmen are having a warm time over a proprosed cow ordinance. At a meeting Monday evening they had a breezy time according to the Altoona Tribune's correspondent, ladies taking a hand in the speech making before the honorable body. "Mr. Smith exploded the plea of mercy for the poor man's cow by showing from the borough's assessment books that out of the 55 cow owners in town only five do not own properties. Some members thought that cows should have the right of way in the daytime but be penned up in the night time. Mr. Law objected to the cows, because they ate green truck in front of the groceries. Mr. McKnight, who is an engineer, favored the cow side, although 'my life is in danger. Every time I strike a cow I don't know what will happen.' A counter petition in favor of the bovine was signed by George W. Neff, William Campbell, Mark Hanna and several other residents. Mrs. John Dean, Mrs. J. B. Hitchcock, the committee of the Village Improvement Society, and L. S. Hoopes spoke in behalf of protecting the lawns and gardens from the devastation wrought by the wandering stock. Charles Curran, R. J. Fox and W. E. Lindsay represented the cow owners. Council finally instructed the secretary to secure a copy of the ordinance in force in Tyrone borough prohibiting the roaming of live-stock upon the streets."

SOME things seem incredible. One of these is found in the announcement that commenced with August, the Monthly Illustrator and Home and Country, New York, which is an illustrated art and family magazine fully up with the times in everything has no superior in America, will be issued at 5 cents a copy and 60 cts. a year by subscription: that being one quarter its present price. The idea seems chimerical and yet there is room for such a publication. In announcing the change the publishers state that "while is made desirable by the modern trend towards more popular price for magazine literature it will not be accompanied by any lowering in tone or cheapening in quality."

The Monthly Illustrator and Home and Country is among our most valued exchanges. It is issued by The Monthly Illustrator Publishing Co., 66-68 Centre St. New York.

—London is spending nearly two million and a half dollars in cleansing and rebuilding one slum. American cities are just beginning to learn how serious is the cumulative evil of slum construction. They may with profit also learn how costly is the necessity of slum destruction. The object lesson offered by London may be studied with interest in all our large cities, and especially in New York, where through the efforts of the State Tenementhouse Commission, legislation has with much difficulty been secured which, if enforced, perpetuated, and added to, will tend to prevent the growth of such conditions as London is now compelled to combat.—Century.

Will Look After the Fish.

Harrisburg, July 14.—Governor Hastings to-day appointed James A. Dale, of York, and C. F. Garwin, of Allegheny, as members of the state fish commission.

—The Fourth of July number of The Youth's Companion is at hand. Exciting adventures and narrow escapes on land and sea—capturing a grizzly in the Rockies, an effort to eclipse all previous explosions in the combination of a balloon with dynamite cartridges, etc.—make this number a veritable cannon cracker among weekly papers.

The demand for good short stories never ends. The difficulty is to meet the demand with nothing but stories of first class quality. No paper in America does this better than The Youth's Companion. Week after week and year after year it comes out, always with good stories, new in plot and skilful in treatment, until one wonders where it gets them all, and how it preserves its infinite variety.

The Fourth of July number this year contains some remarkable stories of the adverturous Fourth of July order. They teach a good lesson of patriotism in showing how the glorious day is celebrated, even in the most remote parts of the country, and they are interesting because they tell how each section celebrates in its own way.

But, my dear captain, you pay me compliments, and I know you are but a grass widower.

That is just it, madam; that's why I catch fire.

To attempt to Cure

catarrh by the use of so-called blood remedies means the expenditure of many dollars and derangement of the stomach.

That catarrh is not caused by blood troubles is selfevident when you reflect that attacks are always due to sudden climatic changes or exposure to cold, and occur most frequently during the winter and spring, though the blood is as pure then as in summer or fall. A remedy which quickly relieves and by thorough treatment cures the catarrhal attacks has been found in Ely's Cream Balm.

AT MULLINER'S CAMP.

Mulliner's camp, on the Hodgkinson, was the most hopeless looking spot in the most God forsaken piece of country in North Queensland, and Hughton, the amalgamator at the Big Surprise crushing mill, as he turned wearily away from the battery tables to look at his retorting fire, cursed silently and vigorously at his tolly in staying there.

It was Saturday night, and the deadly melancholy of Mulliner's was, if possible somewhat accentuated by the crash and rattle of the played out old five head battery, accompanied by the wheezings and groanings of its notoriously unreliable pumping gear. Half a mile away from the decrepit old battery and situated on the summit of an adder infested, ironstone ridge, the dozen or so of bark humpies that constituted Mulliner's camp proper stood out clearly in the bright starlight in their squat ugliness. Hughton, as he threw a log or two into the retort furnace and watched the shower of sparks fly high up over the battery roof, was thinking of old Channing's daughter, Kate, and the curious state of affairs existing between her and his partner Ballantyne. Briefly stated, that is what had occurred—that is as far as Haughton knew.

* * * * * * *

Twelve months before Mrs. Canning, a meek faced, religious minded lady, had succumbed to the worries of life under the combined and prostrating influence of a galvanized iron roof, an independent, Chinaman cook, and a small theological library. Immediately after her death old Channing wrote to his daughter, then at school in Sydney, to come back and cheer up his lonely life. Being a dutiful girl she packed up and went.

On board the steamer she had met Ballantyne, who was returning to Queensland to resume his mining pursuits in the Palmer district. He knew old Channing well by reputation as a wealthy but eccentric old squatter, and in a few days he managed to make the girl fall violently in love with him. The day when the steamer reached Brisbane, a telegram was brought on board for Miss Channing. It was from her father, telling her that Mrs. Lankey of Mount Brindlebul was coming up from Sidney in another week, and she was to wait in Brisbane for her. They were to travel northward together.

If there was one woman in the world she hated, it was Mrs. Lankey of Mount Brindlebul station, in the gulf country, and Ballantyne from whom she could hide nothing, saw his opportunity and and took it. He took her ashore, placed her in lodgings, went to a hotel himself, and the day before her future escort arrived married her.

Perfectly satisfied with the cogent reasons he gave for secrecy in not apprising her father of their marriage, and shedding tears at the nonchalant manner in which he alluded to a honeymoon "some time, in a year or so, when the old man comes to know it," pretty Kate Channing went back alone to her lodgings to await Mrs. Lankey and cogitate upon the peculiarly masterful way in which Ballantyne had wooed and won her.

* * * * *

Six months afterwards she got a letter from Ballantyne, telling her that he had bought Petermann's crushing mill at Mulliner's Camp, "so as to be near you, my pet," he said. At the same time he warned her of the folly of their attempting to meet—at least openly—but added that Haughton, his partner, who knew of his marriage, would visit Calypeo Downs occasionally and give her news of him; also, that they could correspond by the same medium.

Thus matters stood between them for some months till Kate, swearing to meet the cold, calculating Ballantye, adopted the device of riding over a late Sunday afternoon to Milliner's for the mail, instead of her father sending over one of his black boys.

But, instead of meeting her with kisses, Ballantyne terrified her with savage reproaches. It was madness, he said, for her to run such a risk. By and by he would be in a better position. At present he was as poor as a rat, and it was best for them to be apart. And Kate, thoroughly believing in him, bent to his will. She knew that her father was, as Ballantyne thoughtfully observed, such a violent tempered old man that he would cast her off utterly, unless he was "managed" properly, when he learned of her marriage.

"And don't come down this way from Mulliner's," added the careful Ballantyne. "There's an old mail tin about a mile or so away from here, near the worked out alluvial patch. You can always drop a letter in there for me. Haughton's such a good natured ass that he'll play Mercury for you. Anyway I'll send him to look in the tin every Sunday night."

That, so far, was the history of Mr and Mrs. Ballantyne.

* * * * *

"Another duffing crushing," muttered Haughton as he stooped and placed his hand into the bucket of quicksilver under the nozzle of the retort pipe. "What between a reef that doesn't pan out five pennyweights to the ton, and a woman that pans out too rich, I'm sick of the cursed place!"

As he stood up again and, hands on his hips, looked moodily into the fire, a woman came down the rough path leading from Ballantyne's house to the battery. Walking quickly across the lighted space that intervened between the blacksmith's forge and the fire, she placed a billy of tea on the brick furnace wall and then turned her handsome, black browed, gypsylike face up to his. This was Nell Lawson, the woman who had "panned out too rich."

"Here's your tea, Dick," she said.

"Thanks," he said, taking it from her and then, with a quick look over toward the battery, "I wish you would not call me Dick when any of the hands are about. Lawson might hear of it, and I don't want you to get into any trouble over me."

The black eyes sparkled and the smooth olive hued features flushed darkly in the firelight as she grasped his arm.

"You lie!" And she set her teeth. "A lot you care! Do you think I'm a silly? Do you think as I don't know that you want to sling me and don't know how to go about it?" And she grasped his arm savagely.

Haughton looked at her in gloomy silence for a few seconds. Standing there face to face, they were so alike in features—he wiry, muscular, black bearded and bronzed to the hue of an Arab, and she tall, dark haired, with oval, passionate face—they might have been taken for brother and sister.

She let his arm free, and then, being only a working miner's wife, and possessing no handkerchief, whipped her apron to her eyes

"You're a d——d cur!" she said chokingly. "If it hadn't ha been for you, I'd ha gone along all right wi' Bod and put up wi' livin in this place, and now—"

"Look here, Nell," said Haughton, drawing her away into the shadow of the ferge, "I'm a cur, as you say, but I'd be a worse cur to keep on this way. You can't marry me, can you?"

"You used to talk about our boltin—once!" And she snapped out the last word.

Haughton tried to explain why the "bolting" so trenchantly referred to did not eventuate, He was stone broke. Ballantyne was going to do his own amalgamating at the battery, and it would be cruel of him to ask her to share his fortunes. (Here he began to appreciate his leaning to morality.) If she was a single girl he would stay at Mulliner's and fight it out with bad luck for her sake, but they couldn't go on like this any longer. And the people at Mulliner's were beginning to talk about them, etc.

She heard him in silence and then gave a short, jarring laugh—the laugh that ought to tell a man that he is no longer believed in by a woman who has loved him.

"I know," she said quietly. "You want to get clear o' me. You're too sick up with Kate Channing, the proper Miss Channing, that rides over here o' Sundays to meet you on the sly."

At first he meant to undeceive her, then he thought: "What does it matter? I'll be away from here in a day or so, and after I've gone she'll find I'm not so base as she thought me, poor girl!" So, looking away from her so as to avoid the dangerous light that gleamed in her passionate eyes, he made the plunge.

"That's it, Nell. I'm hard up and desperate. If you were a free woman—"

She struck him on the mouth with her clinched hand—"I'll kill her first, Dick Haughton!" and then left him.

A mile or so from the battery, on a seldom used track that led to some abandoned alluvial workings, a stained and weather worn biscuit tin had been nailed to an iron bark tree. In the prosperous days of Mulliner's it had been placed there by the diggers as a receptacle for letters, and its location saved the mailman a long detour to their camp. At present poor loving Kate Channing and Dick Haughton were the only persons who ever looked into it. After getting the station letters from the landlord of the Booming Nugget Kate would ride through the bush and come out on the track just opposite. Then, bending down from her horse, she would peer eagerly into the tin to see if a letter had been left there for her. Generally there was not. So, with a sad, wistful look in her blue eyes, she would drop her own tenderly worded letter in and ride away home.

Twice Nell Lawson had seen her passing over the ridge toward the old workings, and had wondered what had taken her so far off the road, and on each of these occasions she had seen Dick Haughton follow in the same direction shortly after. The first time she simply wondered, the next she grew suspicious, and as she saw him returning went and stopped him As she threw her arms around his neck she felt the rustling of a letter that lay loosely in the front of the dungaree jumper he always wore when at work. She said nothing, but determined to watch, and one day, with the bitterest hatred gathering at her heart, she saw Kate Channing ride up to the tin on the iron bark, look carefully inside, and then drop in a letter. And as Nell Lawson could not read she let it lie there untouched. But from that hour murder lay in her passionate heart.

That evening, as she entered Bod Lawson's humpy, her husband, a big, heavy featured man, looked up and saw the ghastly pallor of her face.

"Why, what's the matter wi' 'ee, Nell? 'Ee be lookin' quite sick loike lately. Tell 'ee what, Nell, 'ee wants a change."

"Mulliner's be a dull place," she answered mechanically.

"Aye, lass, dull as hell in a fog. Mebbe I'll take 'ee somewheres for a spell."

* * * * *

For nearly another week she nursed her hatred and planned her revenge, and Haughton, as he saw the dark rings forming under her eyes, and the cold, listless manner as she went about her work, began to experience a higher phase of feeling for her than that of the mere passion which her beauty had first awakened in him, long months before.

* * * * *

It was 5 o'clock on Sunday afternoon. The fierce, blinding sun had just disappeared behind the hideous basalt range 20 miles away from the Big Surprise, when Nell Lawson put on her white sun hood and walked slowly toward the old alluvial workings. When well out of sight from any near the battery, she turned off toward the creek and made for a big Leichhardt tree the bank. Underneath it and evidently waiting for her was a black fellow, a truculent looking runaway trooper named Barney.

"You got him that fellow, Barney?" she asked in a low voice.

"Yo ai," he replied, keeping one hand behind his back. "Where that plenty fellow money you yabber me yesterday?"

"Here," and she showed him some silver; "10 yellow shilling."

Barney grinned, took the money and then handed her an old broken handled crockery teapot, which, in place of a lid, was covered over with a piece of ti tree bark, firmly secured by a strip of dirty calico.

As soon as the black fellow had gone she picked up that which he had given her and walked quickly along the track till she reached the old mail tin. She stood awhile and listened. Not a sound disturbed the heated, oppressive silence. Placing the teapot on the ground, she lifted the stiff, creaking lid of the tin and pushed it well back. Then taking up the teapot again, she placed one hand firmly upon the ti-tree bark covering the top, while with the other she unfastened the strip of rag that kept it in position. In another moment, grasping the broken spout in her left hand, she held it over the open tin, and with a rapid motion turned it upside down and whipped her right hand from the piece of bark.

Something fell heavily against the bottom of the tin, and in an instant she slammed down the lid and threw the empty teapot in among the boulders, where it smashed to pieces. Then, an evil smile on her dark face, she placed her ear to the side of the tin and listened. A faint creeping, crawling sound was all she heard. In another minute, with hand pressed tightly against her wildly beating heart, she fled homeward.

* * * * * *

"This will be my last ride over, dear Ted," was the beginning of the letter to Ballantyne that lay in Kate Channing's bosom. "Father is very ill, and I cannot leave him. Do let me tell him and ask his forgiveness. It is so miserable for me to keep up this deceit."

Darkness had set in by the time she had got the mail from the landlord of the Booming Nugget and turned her horse's head into the track that led over the ridge to the old workings.

* * * * * *

Two hours before daylight Kate Channing's horse walked riderless up to the slip rails of Calypso Downs, and the stock man who had kept awake awaiting her return went out to let his young mistress in.

"Got throwed somewhere, I suppose," he grumbled after examining the horse. "This is a nice go. It's no use telling the old man about it. He's too sick to be worried just now anyway."

Taking a black boy with him and leading Kate's horse he set out to look for her, expecting, unless she was hurt, to meet her somewhere between the station and Mulliner's Camp. Just as daylight broke the black boy who was leading stopped.

"Young missus been tumble off horse here." And he pointed to where the scrubby undergrowth one side of the track was crushed down and broke as it by a fall.

The stockman nodded. "Horse been shy I think it, Billy, at that old fellow post office there." And he pointed to the old mail tin, which was not ten feet from where Billy said she had fallen off.

"Go ahead, Billy," said the stockman. "I believe young missus not catch him horse again, and she walk along to Mulliner's."

"Yo ai," answered the black boy, and he started ahead. In a few moments he stopped again with a puzzel look and pointed to Kate Channing's track.

"Young missus been walk about all same drunk."

"By jingo! She's got hurted, I fear," said the stockman. "Push ahead, Billy!"

A hundred yards farther on they found her dead, lying face downward on the track.

Lifting her cold, stiffened body in his arms the stockman carried his burden along to Ballantyne's house. Haughton met him at the door. Together they laid the still figure upon the sofa in the front room, and then, while the stockman went for Nell Lawson, Haughton went to Ballantyne's bunk and awoke and told him. His mouth twitched nervously for a second or two, and then his hard, impassive nature asserted itself again.

* * * * * *

"'Tis a terrible thing this, Ballantyne, "said Haughton sympathetically as they walked out together to see the place where she had been thrown.

"Yes," assented the other, "dreadful. Did you hear what Channing's black boy told me?"

"No."

"He says that she had died from snake bite. I believe him too. I saw a boy die on the Etheridge from snake bite, and he looked as she does now. Besides that there is not a scratch or bruise on her body, so she couldn't have received any hurt unless it was an internal one when she was thrown Here's the place." And then he started back, for, lying at the foot of the tree, was the panting, trembling figure of Nell Lawson.

She had tried to get there before them to efface all traces of her deadly work.

"What are you doing here, Mrs. Lawson?" said Ballantyne sharply. "We sent over for you. Don't you know what has happened?"

The strange, hysterical "Yes" that issued from her pale lips caused Ballantyne to turn his keen gray eyes upon her intently. Then something of the truth must have flashed across his mind, for he walked up to the tree and looked into the tin.

"Good God!" he said. "Poor little woman!" And then he called to Haughton, "Come here and see what killed her."

Haughton looked, and a deadly horror chilled his blood. Lying in the bottom of the tin was a thick, brownish red death adder. It raised its hideous, flatted head for a moment, then lowered it and lay there regarding them with its dead eye.

"How did it get there?" he asked.

Ballatyne pointed to Nell Lawson, who now stood leaned against a tree for support.

Haughton sprang to her side and seized her hands.

"You are a murderous, Nell? What had she done to you that you should take her innocent life? She was nothing to me—she was Ballantyne's wife."

She looked at him steadily, and her lips moved; then a shrill, horrible laugh burst forth, and she fell unconscious at his feet.

Perhaps this story should have another ending and Nell Lawson have met with a just retribution. But, as in the case of many other women—and men—with nature such as hers, she did not, for when old Channing lay dying she nursed him tenderly to the last, and perhaps because of this, or for that he could never understand why blued eyed Kate had never come back, he had left her all he had, much to the wondering admiration of honest, dull witted Bob her husband, who almost immediately returned home after the old man's death, and filled with a great peace of mind and a considerable quantity of bad rum, fell down a shaft and broke his neck after the manner of one of the old Channing bullocks—and then she married Ballantyne.

Everything seems to come to him who waits, especially if he is systematic in his villiany, and has a confiding wife, as had Ballantyne in his first matrimonial venture.—Sketch.

Fits Cured

From U.S. Journal of Medicine

Prof. W. H. Peeke, who makes a specialty of Epilepsy, has without doubt treated and cured more cases than any living Physician; his success is astonishing. We have heard of cases of so years' standing cured by him. He publishes a valuable work on this disease, which he sends with a large bottle of his absolute cure, free to any sufferers who may send their P. O. and Express address. We advise any one wishing a cure to address Prof. W. H. PEEKE, F. D., 4 Cedar St., New York

The work of Wednesday afternoon at the Dental session was given over to the reading of papers. 'A new method of attaching partial sets of artificial teeth, comprising a combination of Bridge-and plate-work,' was the subject of a paper read by Dr. A. S. Condit, of Findlay, Ohio. Henry C. Register, D.D.S., M. D., of Philadelphia used as his subject. 'The Physiological Influence as a cure for Dental Caries' From Clinical Observations. The next and last paper was the 'Prosthesis of Crowns' by Henry H. Burchard, D.D. S., M. D., of Philadelphia. These papers were very interesting and held the close attention of the members of the society.

In the evening two lantern illustrations were given which were very instructive. The first was 'The Value of Temperamental Indications in the Successful Reconstruction of the Edentulous Human Jaw' by Dr. I. Norman Broomell of Philadelphia. The other was an exhibit of 'Studies in Special Dental Anatomy' by M. H. Cryer, D.D. S., M. D.

THURSDAY MORNING.

The last day of the sessions was occupied in the election of officers and committees for the ensuing year. They are as follows: President, Dr. H. N. Young, Wilkesbarre; First Vice President, Dr. W. F. Litch, Philadelphia; Second Vice President, Dr. T. C. Stellwagen, Philadelphia; Recording Secretary, Dr. E. V. Kratzer, Reading; Corresponding Secretary, Dr. V. S. Jones, Bethlehem; Treasurer, Dr. G. W. Klump, Williamsport.

Dr. Henry Gerhart of Lewisburg, Dr. F. Libbey of Pittsburg and Dr. H. B. McFadden of Philadelphia were appointed as members of the State Board of Dental Examiners.

The meeting next year will be held at Glenn Summit in July.

Editor Brandt Not Guilty.

Erie, Pa, July 8.—Charles M. Brandt, the editor of the Arbeiter Zeitung, charged with arson, was discharged to-night by the alderman. Brandt and Sam Weiss, the editor of The People, who caused his arrest for firing his office, are in a fight for supremacy in the field of labor journalism. Brandt alleges that Weiss is trying to ruin him for the sake of getting possession of his paper.

Senator Quay Will Preside.

Beaver Falls, Pa., July 8.—The committee in charge of the arrangements for the formal opening of the new Beaver Valley hospital at Kenwood have received a communication from Senator Quay stating that he will preside at the opening ceremonies. Gov. Hastings and his staff will be present also. The date has not been decided on.

—A Catholic priest of Boston is fond of telling a story at his own expense: "I was coming out of church a week or two ago," he says, "and directly in front of me were two old women who did not know that I was within earshot. An' did ye know, Mrs. Mulligan, that Father Blank was going to Europe? said one to the other. 'Indade I did not, thin, Mrs. McSwipes; an' what's takin' him there?' was the immediate query. 'My tin cints and your tin cints, Mrs. Mulligan, and that's what's takin' him aboord a Coonard,' replied the informative dame with a significant toss of her gray head."

Died of Blood Poisoning.

Dunbar, Pa., July 9.—James Barry, a prominent and respected citizen of Dunbar, died after an illness of many months. Mr. Barry, who was 43 years of age, had his arm amputated about two years ago, and soon after blood poisoning set in, which at last caused his death.

A Great Difference.

Appointed By Governor Hastings

Harrisburg, July 8.—Governor Hastings to-day reappointed Joseph Thomas of Quakertown, Bucks county, and Thomas Bradley, of Philadelphia, trustees of the state hospital at Norristown. He also appointed Clinton F. Keiter of Williamstown, Dauphin county, to a free scholarship in the veterinary department of the University of Pennsylvania.

Impoverished * Blood

whether due to the inheritance of some scrofulous disorder, or caused by a depleted condition of the system, is the cause of much agony. A terrible complexion, foul eruptions, and loathesome ulcers are but outward symptoms—the sufferer should remember that all of the great organs of the body are likewise diseased, and the day cannot be long distant when death must surely ensue.

Bovinine

when taken for this trouble, is a means of salvation. It creates new flesh tissue and pure red blood corpuscles, and by giving strength to the great vital centres of the body, it enables them to perform their functions naturally, and thus dispel the existing poisons by the natural channels. It is not a medicine, but a powerful food preparation and invigorant, and is endorsed by over 25,000 physicians.

Refused the Writ.

Harrisburg, Pa., July 8.—Deputy Attorney General Elkin has refused the application for a writ of quo warranto against the Titusville and Pithole Plank Road Company to forfeit its charter for non-user, and on the ground that it was not property incorporated. The company was organized in 1866 by wealthy oil producers for the construction of a road from Titusville to Pithole. At that time Pithole was the center of the oil development in this state. It is ten miles from Titusville and the roads leading to it were so terribly bad that a plank road was built at a cost of $200,000. Soon after the oil excitement died out. Pithole was deserted and has since been practically dead. The company has ceased to collect tolls at that end of the road, and the people who use it want to secure possession so as not to be required to pay at the other end. The incorporators of the company never got a cent out of the road.

The Twin Shaft Disaster.

Wilkesbarre, July 8.—Since the work toward rescuing the buried miners began a progress of only 300 feet has been made. The place where the bodies are supposed to be is still several hundred feet beyond. To morrow the investigating inspectors begin taking testimony.

A Circus Man Fatally Hurt.

Altoona, Pa., July 8.—A circus man named Rudolph Sullways, of Hudson City, N. J., was struck today by the main line express on the Pennsylvania railroad, a few miles east of here. His injuries will prove fatal. Senator Quay was on the train when the man was struck.

BARDSLEY'S PARDON.

Reported From Harrisburg That It Is a Sure Thing.

Harrisburg, July 9.—John Bardsley's days of prison life are numbered. He will soon leave the Eastern penitentiary a broken down old man to start life over again. His friends have been at work for nearly two years to secure his release. Their labors have been so quiet as not to attract public notice. To have spread broadcast what they were doing might have aroused public sentiment against the famous embezzler and interfered with the chances for his freedom. They have pulled every string that could be reached and now have the assurance that their efforts are to be rewarded with success.

The board of pardons will give a hearing to-morrow in Bardsley's case. The application will be presented by Robt. Alexander of Philadelphia, who has stood by his client through all his troubles. Mr. Alexander will have the case to himself, as no resistence will be offered by the commonwealth. Ex-Attorney General Hensel of Lancaster, who has appeared for the prisoner at previous hearings before the board, is in Europe, and will therefore take no part in to-morrow's argument. The pressure from certain quarters has been so great on the board for Bardsley's pardon that it is said on the most reliable authority that the members have made up their minds to recommend him for executive clemency. Gov. Hastings will approve their recommendation and order the pardon to issue.

We denounce the present Democratic Tariff as sectional, partisan and one-sided one disastrous to the Treasury and destructive of business enterprise, and we demand such an equitable Tariff on foreign imports which come in competition with American products as will not only furnish adequate revenue for the necessary expenses of the government, but will protect American labor from the degradation and the wage level of other lands. We are not pledged to any other particular schedules. The question of rates is a practical question, to be goverened by the conditions of time and of production. The ruling and uncomprising principles is the protection and developement of American labor and industry. The country wants a right settlement and then it wants rest.—Republican Platform of 1896.

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co, Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

Connellsville Coke Industry.

Dunbar, Pa., July 9.—The outlook of the coke industry in the Connellsville region is brighter than at any time this season, as 10,052 ovens were in operation last week and coke production for the five days the works were in blast was higher than the week previous. With the increased production in coke comes the report that coke will be reduced in price 25 or 30 cents per ton. A local operator said to-day that it was altogether probable that the first of August would see the price of coke reduced and the idle works in the coke region fired up. The wages of the coke workers are higher than for many years previous, but the majority of the works are making runs of but four days in the week.

Stabbed His Son.

Greensburg, July 9.—Emanuel Neff an engineer at the Scott Haven mine stabbed and it may be fatally injured his son, aged 16 years who was assisting him at his work yesterday morning. Neff became enraged at the boy because he thought he was not attending properly to his duties and pulled a knife and stabbed him in the side and cut his arm badly. The elder Neff has not yet been arrested. The boy was conveyed to his home at Blytheside.

Dealers in that delusive beverage, "Ambrosia," in Irwin, recently had a call from a special officer of the United States government. The officer said it was a malt decoction, and was made in a brewery. He added that he did not wish to make trouble, but government tax must be paid if the sale continued. The result was that the government tax was paid up to July and the dealers took no chances. Sale was stopped and the stock on hand sent back to the manufacturer.

A FINE DISPLAY.

Undine Fire Works Attracts a Large Crowd on Thursday Evening.

The Undine Fire company boys made themselves very popular on Thursday evening by giving to the public, one of the finest displays of fire works ever seen in Bellefonte. It was the display orginally intended for Hecla park but which was postponed owing to the hard rains on that day. The Undine boys were not compelled to give the display after that day and could have saved money by keeping them until next year, but they wished to convince the people that when they advertise anything, they intend to carry it out if such a thing is possible. Their celebration on Thursday evening being purely voluntary, made it all the more enjoyable and in the estimation of the public in general, Undine stock is 'way up.

It was the perfect manner in which everything was arranged that accounted for its being such a success. Early in the evening the Undine band marched to the Diamond and rendered several very pretty selections which fairly captivated the large crowd which had gathered upon all sides.

Suddenly the glare of fire works loomed up from South Allegheny street on Reservoir Hill. It was a splendid place for such a purpose and the display could be plainly seen from all parts of the city. The large crowd stayed to the last and when it was all over, there was not one but who pronounced it the finest pyrotechnical display ever witnessed in this city.

Cannot Make Improvements.

West Newton, Pa., July 10.—The law in reference to increasing the debt of the boroughs has brought a sudden stop to improvements in West Newton. The purpose of Council was to increase the capacity of the electric light plant, lay out new streets and build new sewers.

At a special meeting last night Borough Solicitor Kunkle said nothing could be done this year, as the borough bonds outstanding represent 3½ per cent. of the valuation, the law allowing but 2 per cent. A proposition was made to enlarge the electric plant, and then mortgage it, but this was declared contrary to the letter of the law.

At midnight Mr. Whalen was awakened by the noise made by burglars trying to enter the house, and went outside to drive the intruders away. DEATH CAME SUDDENLY.

Dr. Charles D. Hertz of Tyrone Dies of Heart Disease This Morning.

A sad death was that of Charles D. Hertz of Tyrone, who died suddenly at the Brockerhoff House at 4.30 o'clock this morning. Death came without a warning and almost before his brother, Dr. J. C. Hertz of Easton who was sleeping in the same room, could realize what had happened, he had passed away.

Dr. Hertz was a member of the state Dental Society and came te this city to attend the annual meeting this week. He and his brother occupied the same room at the Brockerhoff House and he was apparently enjoying good health. He attended the sessions at the Court House on Tuesday and Wednesday and took an active interest in all that was going on. He then returned to the hotel on Wednesday evening after the close of the session in the Court House and chatted and conversed with friends until about ten o'clock when he retired for the night. About 4.30 o'clock this morning Dr. J. C. Hertz heard an unusual noise in the room and hastily getting out of bed discovered that his brother was ill and running across the hallway he roused Dr. W. W. Hollingsworth of Philadelphia who responded without taking time to dress. A porter was also sent for Dr. G. F. Harris but before either physician could reach the room the man was cold in death.

Deceased was 28 years of age and single. His home is in Milton but he has been practicing dentistry in Tyrone. The remains were taken charge of by Undertaker Harris and prepared for burial. They were shipped to Milton at 2.15 o'clock this afternoon accompanied by Dr. J. C. Kertz.

Child Drank Lye.

Emma, a two year old child of David Wyland of Milesburg, drank a quantity of lye on Friday evening and as a consequence is now lying in a precarious condition and is suffering intense pain. A little niece of Mrs. Wyland was sent by its mother to the Wyland home with a small tin cup for some of the liquid, when Mrs. Wyland put a small quantity of lye in the cup and set it on the table. In a short time the child was attracted by the small cup, and picking it up drank the contents. Antidotes were speedily administered, but it is not thought the child can recover.

Parted From His Bride.

New Brighton, Pa., July 10.—John Marshall, a machinist of New Castle, came to Beaver to day and was married at the clerk of court's office to Mrs. Lizzie Monaghan, whose husband was killed on the railroad a few weeks ago.

After the ceremony the couple came to New Brighton, got a keg of beer, and with some friends were celebrating, when the police arrived. As a result Marshall is passing his honeymoon in the lockup.

The Times, (democrat) says, in speaking in speaking of the democrcratic convention. Whatever head the convention may give the ticket, it won't be anything to the head the county will put upon it later on. And again "Whoever may do the running, the party will have to sweat for it." For once the Times is just right, and we predict its forecast of the result, will be correct, after election.

Titusville Lumber Dealer Fails.

Titusville, Pa., July 10.—Edgar Hale, dealer in lumber and coal, was closed by the sheriff this morning on judgements by the Second National bank of this city, to the amount of $7500. The assets are sufficient to meet all demands. Mr. Hale is the oldest dealer in his line in the city, and was supposed to be on the best of footing financially.

The Saddle Question.

Shows pelvis as it rests on the ordinary saddle.

This is an illustration of the old style saddle. If you will observe it carefully you will note that it fits like a glove (and a saddle should not). It presses the sensitive parts, causes soreness, stiffness and chafing, and has made cycling to a certain extent injurious, because few could enjoy a long ride without fear of injury.

All this is now changed. Here is represented the perfect saddle—the Christy Anatomical Saddle, showing the pelvis as it rests on the pads. The Christy Anatomical Saddle is the only saddle that is built right. Made of metal, of light weight, cannot warp or change its shape, has pads that rest the entire body, does not press the sensitive parts, prevents stiffness, and makes cycling a pleasure.

Shows pelvis as it rests on the Christy Saddle.

—An old horseman says: Now that fly time is approaching those who have charge of horses can save a great deal of annoyance by a simple remedy. When you go to the stable in the morning, take with you a sponge and a pail of cold water. Wash the eyes and heads of your horses, and make them as clean as you would like your face to be when you appear at the breakfast table. Did you notice that flies are continually buzzing around the heads of horses in hot weather? There is cause for it, and the cause is that the heads of horses are dirty. Try the simple remedy, and see if good results do not follow. If the operation doesn't keep the flies off the washing will be a good thing for the horses at any rate.

BURGLARS MAKE A BIG HAUL

Bold Robbery at E. L. Powers' Shoe Store Early Monday Morning.

Numerous robberies have been committed in this city during the past month and they are now becoming almost a nightly occurrence. Fortunately, in the majority of cases, the robbers secured but little booty. This was, however, not their fault, as in different instances they were scared away before they could accomplish their purpose.

Although frustrated in their attempts at robbery in some cases, they have at last been successful. This time they entered E. L. Powers' shoe store and carried off a considerable stock of shoes. They afterward escaped and now no trace can be found as to the identity of the guilty parties.

About 1 o'clock Monday morning when Mrs. Fritz, who lives directly over the shoe store, heard a noise coming, as she supposed, from the store room below. She acquainted her husband with the fact, but thought it was the clerk, Mr. G. L. Williams, returning from a bicycle ride and putting his wheel in the store. Mr. and Mrs. Fritz then went to sleep again and, according to Mr. Fritz's story to a DAILY NEWS reporter, slept about an hour when they were awakened by another noise as if a window had fallen. They then got up and came to the balcony in front. They saw a man standing in the doorway of the store. The thief saw that he had been discovered and quickly ran to the main entrance of the Arcade building. After staying in the hallway for a few moments he came out again, and running down High street disappeared around the corner onto South Water street.

When the store was opened up this morning the extent of the robbery was made known. The thieves were in the store about an hour. They evidently knew the location of the best goods as only these were taken Fully thirty pairs of the finest shoes in the store room were taken from the centre of the room, and no telling how much from the shelves.

The supposition is that an entrance was effected through the transom over the front door. The back window was raised and the shutters opened so as to enable the robbers to escape from either end if detected. Before they left they closed the shutters but neglected to lower the window. The fastenings on the shutters were not fixed as they were on Saturday night when Mr. Powers closed up. Finger marks in the dust can be plainly seen over the transom sill. It is thought the culprits left the store in this way. A rig was soon seen coming down to the Arcade and afterward leaving. The burglar who ran down the street was a rather tall man and well built. He wore a pair of striped trousers and a black coat.

Mr. Powers feels his loss very keenly, over the fact that it will be impossible for some time to find out just what sizes of shoes have been taken in order to replace them.

If these robberies continue at the rate they have for the past three weeks Bellefonte can be truly styled the "Burglar's Mecca" or a "paradise for thieves."

A Frightful Runaway.

A frightful runaway occurred on West Lamb street early this morning and as a result of which, two wagons were demolished end a horse badly bruised.

Two teams were coming toward each other when a piece of paper was blown out of the gutter onto the road directly in front of the horses causing them to become frightened and unmanageable. The teams crashed into each other and one horse was thrown to the ground while the wagons were thrown into a heap along the side o the road. The other horses broke the harness and ran away but were soon caught. Fortunately no one was injured in the collision and the damage to the wagons was sufficiently repaired to enable the owners to drive home.

Another Robbery.

Close onto the attempted robbery on Bishop Street on Wednesday evening comes another daring attempt to rob the home of Mr. Samuel Sheffer on East Curtin Street early on Saturday. Again the burglar was compelled to leave without securing any booty but he made a bold attempt before he was discovered.

It was about 2:30 o'clock this morning when a servant at the Sheffer home thought she heard a noise at the back door. She had a severe attack of the toothache and had gone down stairs to get some medicine when she heard the noise. She thought it was the dog and went back to bed. Before she had gotten soundly asleep again. she heard another noise this time at the screen door of her room which leads directly out onto the back porch. She called to Mr. Sheffer who with his sons Lester and Paul, ran into the back room but too late to intercept the culprit who by this time had crawled down the water spout and made his escape. Fortunately he was discovered before he could steal anything. He had rammed his fist through the screen door so he could reach through and unfasten the hook on the inside, and had he been given two minutes more time he would have gained an entrance to the room. The paint on the water spout was badly scratched off where the robber's feet had rubbed against it while sliding down. He escaped in the darkness and made for parts unknown.

It is not definitely known who the burglar was although Mr. Sheffer has strong suspicion based on the description furnished by the servant who saw him.

A Snake Around His Neck.

Friday afternoon Brakeman Kizer and a friend named Johnson, of Renovo, went to the mountain on the south side on a short outing. The News says that Mr. Johnson fell asleep while lying on a blanket and was awakened by experiencing a smothering sensation. Leaping to his feet he found that a blacksnake had wound itself around his neck, and was going through wonderful gyrations not pleasant to the trainman's feelings. Mr. Johnson succeeded in relessing himself from the embrace of the reptile, and he and his companion lost no time in abandoning their 'ideal' retreat.

DEMOCRATS CELEBRATE.

They Hold a Bryan Ratification Meeting on Friday Evening.

The Democrats of Centre county held a ratification meeting on Friday evening in honor of the nomination of William J. Bryan for president at the Democratic national convention at Chicago.

The demonstration was gotten up on short notice as the final news was not received here until almost 6 o'clock. The Undine band was hired to draw and hold a crowd while the different speakers substituted the name of Bryan for that of Bland in their speeches prepared several days ago, and fired them into the crowd with an earnestness that was almost convincing. They probably thought "what's in a name, anyway," and shouted just as loud as though Bryan had been their choice from the start. The meeting did not lack in enthusiasm, however, and was all the projectors expected. Those in charge did their part well and to them is due the credit of introducing the unknown nominee to a few people of our city.

Stirring addresses were delivered by Hammon Seehler, C. M. Bower, H. S. Taylor, J. H. Wetzel and W. C. Heinle. One could almost see a silver lining on the clouds while the speakers were teaching the class its lesson. During the speakers' remarks there was frequent applause from the band, who were notified when to cheer by a pull of a string in the hands of the Big Chief on the Court House steps. But it was truly an attentive crowd even if it was small, and what they lacked in numbers they made up in applause—that is, when Jimmie pulled the string.

The principal addresses of the evening were those of Messrs. Heinle and Taylor. They gave their hearers a treat by giving them a free ride on the wave of political history from the year 1800 up to the present time. The auditory enjoyed it too, and all pronounced it to have been the longest trip they had ever made in so short a time.

But it was a good old jollification anyway and had the effect of making things lively for several hours, and the speakers are deserving of much credit for this if nothing else. It showed that the Bellefonte Democrats are up to date when it is necessary and are not afraid to make themselves heard if an opportunity is given.

The monster demonstration concluded with a general free silver debate at C. M. Parrish's drug store, which waxed warm for fully an hour and many good points were advanced on both sides.

CAUSED BY LOVE

Unfortunate Ending of a Young Man's Trip to Bellefonte.

"Love led him estray." This is what happened to a Lock Haven young man on Tuesday in this city. It is a story of love and romance with a sad and unfortunate ending. The young man loved, pressed his case and lost. The youthful lover probably thought of the old, old saying that "Faint heart n'eer won fair lady" and determined to be brave, but brave as he was he could not overcome the obstacles in the way and at latest reports, his matrimonial path is still untrodden.

The young gentleman in question came to Bellefonte on Monday in quest of pleasure. He was infatuated with a young lady living in this city and he availed himself of the opportunity to call and see her. But here he missed his calculations and he was poorly rewarded for his trouble. The head of the house objected to his presence and refused to allow him to enter. His entreaties fell upon deafears and the young man concluded that the only possible way left was to resort to strategy. Going down street he bought some groceries and coming back again tried to get in the house. This time he was taken in hand by the head of the house who gave him a sound drubbing.

Even this failed to cool his ardor for the young lady and as a last resort, the police were sent for. They quickly responded and ejected the unwelcome guest who of course violently protested. The police had some little difficulty in taking him away but would have left him go free only he insisted upon going back to see his girl and to protect the young man from another thrashing at the house, they concluded the best thing to be done was to lock him up. This they did and later officer Garis accompanied him to the evening train to send him home. He was put on all right but before the train had pulled out very far he jumped off again and returned to his hotel for the night.

A Thrilling Experience.

On Friday evening the passers by on the streets were horrified by seeing a horse coming down High street at a mad pace. Brooken harness was flying in the air and it seemed every moment that the horse's feet would get tangled and throw it to the ground. The people ran in every direction to get out of the path of the runaway beast and fortunately no one was hurt. The horse belonged to Joseph Montgomery and was hitched to a buggy and standing in front of Mr. Montgomery's residence on East Linn street when it suddenly started off and before any one could stop it, it was going down the street on a gallop. The buggy was badly broken in the race and the horse finally freed itself from the shafts. It ran down to the yards of the Bellefonte Fuel and Supply Company and there stopped. Fortunately the horse escaped without a scratch.

Grapes for Coughs and for Singers

Auntie Rachael, a Holland nurse, has discovered a novel and effective way of using grapes in combination with Elecampane Root and Horehound for the purpose of curing coughs, colds and sore throat.

It is called Aunt Rachaels Elecampane Horehound Cordial and it is said that physicians are recommending it freely in the East. Singers and lecturers carry a bottle with them.
